Few CW petitions trigger concerns

Some 80 employers or their representatives attend U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services' session on filing the Form I-129CW, the form used by employers in filing applications for a CNMI-only transitional worker status for their foreign workers, at the American Memorial Park indoor auditorium yesterday morning.

Many employers are still confused and unsure about the information they have on the Commonwealth-only worker petition process, resulting in less than 3 percent of foreign workers who have so far been petitioned for CW status as of Nov. 4.

Of the estimated 13,399 foreign workers who are "potentially eligible" for Form I-129CW petitions, only 366 have so far been petitioned by their employers.

This leaves an estimated 10,000 more foreign workers who have yet to be petitioned by their CNMI employers, barely two weeks before the Nov. 27 deadline.

'Let full House decide on Fund withdrawals bill'

By HAIDEE V. EUGENIO
haidee_eugenio@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

A committee that reviewed a bill allowing non-retired members of the NMI Retirement Fund to withdraw their contributions from the pension agency without severance of employment or penalties has recommended that the full membership of the House decide on the legislation.

The Committee on Health and Welfare, chaired by Rep. Sylvester Iguel (Cov-Saipan), said yesterday that the panel sees both potential benefits and possible adverse effects if House Bill 17-226 is enacted.

"As a result, the members of the committee find it reasonable and necessary that the full membership of the House participate in deciding what action to take on the measure," the committee said in its report.

HB 17-226, introduced by Speaker Eli Cabrera (R-Saipan) on Sept. 21, may be acted on during today's session, along with a new House bill seeking to legalize casino gambling on Saipan.

Iguel's panel said the enactment of HB 17-226 may help the CNMI government by authorizing qualified government employees to withdraw their contributions from the Fund,

"thus decreasing the government's financial obligation to the pension fund."

The committee, in its four-page Nov. 14 report, said while the benefits of the bill are far reaching, its enactment into law may shorten the "already short lifespan of the Retirement Fund, prompting strong opposition of its passage by the NMI Retirement Fund."

Fund administrator Richard Villagomez, in a Sept. 26 letter to the speaker, said the bill has "ambiguities and problems" that need to be rectified.

The Fund said the bill will allow 2,996 active employee members to withdraw their employee contributions, and at the same time about 2,940 members receiving benefits as retirees, surviving spouses and surviving children will be left with only a little over $175 million to support their accrued benefits.

The annual cost for benefits alone in 2009 was over $63 million, a figure that's a little higher as others retire or refund.

"Without current funding support for those that are retired and their surviving spouses and children, the Fund will definitely run out of funds to make payments in less than three years," Villagomez said.

Sora Ike Tabi Fiesta 2011

The Marianas Visitors Authority reached out to over 41,000 attendees at the Sora Ike Tabi Fiesta 2011 held on Oct. 15 and 16 in Sendai, Japan, sharing information about Northern Marianas tourism attractions to potential tourists.

The fiesta was held at Brandom Ichiban-cho/Sun Mool Ichibancho, the most popular shopping streets in Sendai. The consumer travel show was organized by Sendai Airport Internationalization Promotion Committee and Japan Association of Travel Agents (JATA), and sponsored by the Sendai Chamber of Commerce.

At the Northern Marianas booth, the MVA distributed destination brochures, Saipan-da! stickers, and wristbands. Saipan-da! backpacks were also awarded as raffle prizes throughout the 2-day event.

A total of 35 tourism-related organizations participated, including national tourist offices, local governments, airlines, and travel agencies. More visitors and booths were part of the event compared to last year. Although Sendai suffered great damage from the March 2011 earthquake, signs of recovery are seen, including the restoration of normal operations at Sendai Airport.

Central government, public schools owe CUC $6M

» PUC slams utilities execs for unfair treatment to customers
 » Disconnection notices to be issued to public schools

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
 moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
 REPORTER

Public Utilities Commission chair Viola Alepuyo is concerned about the Commonwealth Utilities Corp.'s long-standing practice of letting its paying patrons—residential customers and commercial businesses—subsidize the shortfall of its delinquent customers and for letting these delinquent accounts be reconnected without paying a single penny.

Of particular concern for Alepuyo are the burgeoning unpaid accounts of the central government and the Public School System, both of which top the list of accounts with huge unpaid obligations.

"Here's my concern. We don't want to put our kids out of the schools or lose federal funding because God knows we need them. But we also need to make sure that we keep PSS on its toes and pay what is supposed to be paid. If they can't pay and they come in and promise a repayment plan, we have to make sure that it is based on good faith to act. It sounds like that it's all words from PSS but nothing has been done. In the meantime, CUC still has to pay for fuel to continue providing electrical usage to people but it's paying customers—the residential and businesses—who are subsidizing for them and that's troublesome," Alepuyo told CUC officials during yesterday's meeting.

CUC chief financial officer Charles Warren disclosed that as of Sept. 30 this year, the central government owes CUC $2.4 million while PSS owes $3.6 million.

Warren said that CUC has $7.025 million in total government receivables as of September this year, with PSS' and central government's obligations representing the bulk of that amount. Other autonomous agencies' debt total $772,511 while the Northern Marianas College owes $117,285.

CUC officials also disclosed yesterday that it had rejected the proposed memorandum of understanding submitted by PSS, which seeks to pass on $1.7 million of its unsettled account to the central government.

Although the central government has acknowledged that it will shoulder this $1.7 million debt, Deborah Fisher, CUC legal counsel, said that there was no clear repayment plan.

She said they are now drafting a new agreement that will set a definite time to settle this debt, whoever between PSS and the central government is responsible for this obligation.

The $1.7 million PSS obligation is being passed on to the government to offset the budget allotments for public schools that the central government failed to remit last fiscal year.

According to Fisher, CUC officials have also discussed the possibility of shutting down public schools, but in the end were asked to defer the action because PSS is going to pay. However, no deadline has been set by both PSS and CUC for this.

Warren disclosed that PSS was supposed to be disconnected since last week but because it requested some days to make the payment, disconnection notices were deferred. However, PSS has yet to make good on this promise and no school has been cut off from the CUC grid, he said.

According to Warren, CUC purchases fuel every other day and pays $1.5 million for this every week. The $6 million collectible from PSS and central government, he said, translates to a month's supply of fuel. He confirmed that paying customers and CUC vendors subsidize the cash shortfall.

CUC vs power authorities in other areas unique to the CNMI, Georgetown Consulting said that there is a difference in how disconnection policies are implemented. He cited instances in Guam where portion of hospitals, schools, and government offices were cut off for some time due to unpaid government obligations for power and water.

The same has happened in the U.S. Virgin Islands, when its power authority cut off auto-nous agencies' offices and portion of its public hospital.

PUC also discovered that CUC had reconnected power and water without charge—a violation of its own policy—at the "request" of the administration or the Legislature.

Sen. Juan Ayuyu (Ind-Rota) and Rep. Frank Dela Cruz (Rep-Saipan) expressed disappointment with this practice and asked CUC officials to adhere to its own policy and regulations and remove the special treatment accorded the central government, including PSS.

CUC's Warren disclosed that disconnection of power lines is "beyond my control but my bosses."

CUC remains without a board of directors, so although it is no longer under an emergency, it is still technically under the Executive Branch.

Medicare uncovers prevalent outdated prescriptions at hospital

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
REPORTER

The U.S. Department of Health & Human Services Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services recently issued a report to the Commonwealth Healthcare Corp. enumerating several deficiencies it uncovered during its last resurvey at the Commonwealth Health Center.

Health corporation CEO Juan N. Babauta confirmed this with Saipan Tribune, describing the report as voluminous and with majority of deficiencies dealing with outdated prescription drugs.

"The report is very detailed...and we've been having a lot of issues with respect to outdated prescription drugs in our hospital. That's the Medicare findings in the latest report we received," said Babauta, adding that the corporation has two weeks to respond to the report and is now in the process of completing the response.

Babauta described the other concerns as minor deficiencies, including unclosed doors and close contamination issues at some hospital sections.

Medicare representatives inspected the hospital in September this year as part of the federal agency's resurvey of the facility.

"But I am happy to say that there are no major issues with respect to meeting the standards set forth by Medicare. We're working on our response and we are going to submit it on the deadline. We will respond accordingly to all their findings," he said.

He said the corporation has a quality assurance person that ensures all Medicare requirements and standards are being met. Babauta said the corporation takeover has also no impact on the situation with Medicare because this deals with federal requirements and eligibility.

Medicare received a complaint against the hospital's services in January 2010, prompting them to conduct an investigation. The federal agency found serious deficiencies in the hospital's services and threatened to terminate its "provider agreement" if corrective actions are not enforced.

Resurveys are part of Medicare's requirement that validates the content of corrective plans; visits are unannounced. In the 112-page Statement of Deficiencies first issued by Medicare in 2010, it said that CHC's nursing services failed to meet the six conditions involving governing body, quality assessment and performance improvement, medical staff, nursing services, radiologic services, and infection control.

Early this year, CHC was also placed on emergency status due to lack of supplies and other immediate needs. During this declaration, $1.7 million was reprogrammed to pay for the immediate needs of the hospital. Inadequate budget also prevented the hospital from filling important vacancies in key areas, resulting in noncompliance with certain Medicare requirements.

Among these positions is the director for Medical Affairs, which has been vacant for four years. "This is unacceptable...we need a director for Medical Affairs," Babauta said.

Dr. Dan Lamar was recently appointed to the position in an acting capacity.

Every year, CHC receives from $8 million to $10 million in reimbursement from Medicare for various services.

DHS, in its final worker rule published on Sept. 7, said that "a total of 13,399 foreign workers are potentially eligible for CW status."

David Gulick, USCIS district director, said yesterday he's "concerned" that only a few beneficiaries have so far been petitioned for CW status by employers.

"Yes I'm concerned that's why we're here, that's why I'm back," he told reporters.

Gulick, along with immigration services officer Diane Zedde, began yesterday a three-day session for employers on the filing of Form I-129CW, hoping to help as many employers as possible fill out the form in petitioning their foreign employees ahead of the deadline.

Over 80 employer representatives attended yesterday's session, wherein audience members were able to ask questions about the filing process.

A second USCIS session will be held today from 10am to 12pm at the American Memorial Park auditorium, and Gulick hopes that employers with questions and concerns about the form will attend. The last session will be held tomorrow.

Gulick said that "based upon generic figure," they are estimating between 8,000 and 12,000 foreign workers to be eligible for CW.

"We only had filings for 366 people," he said, as of Nov. 4. "Apparently there's still a lot of confusion."

The number of petitions filed for 366 beneficiaries is way surpassed by the now "close to 3,000" parole extensions.

Gulick went over every page of Form I-129CW, Petition for a CNMI-Only Nonimmigrant Transitional Worker, to help guide employers in completing the form for submission to the California Service Center. He also answered questions posed by employers.

One petition could cover more than one foreign worker if the workers have the same job classification and location, among other things.

Employers and document handling service firms interviewed yesterday confirmed that they have not filed CW petitions yet for their foreign workers because of confusion, and their need to obtain more information.

Josie Reyes, processing agent at Sunflower Marketing Corp., an accounting and document handling services business, said USCIS' session yesterday was "very helpful" for those who attended it, especially because Gulick "went over the form page by page."

"We got so many clarifications," Reyes told Saipan Tribune. She said after the USCIS session, they are now more prepared and confident in filing the Form I-129CW for their clients.

Reyes said they and other employers initially thought, for example, that employers are required to submit employees' police clearance, photographs, and copies of diplomas, transcript of records and proof of educational attainment—and these turned out not to be needed.

Dr. Ike Dela Cruz, former secretary of the Department of Lands and Natural Resources, said he has yet to petition his foreign workers for a CW because he felt he needed more information on filling up the form.

He has three foreign workers for his business, Ike's House and Land Rental and Construction, Farming and Fishing.

"Maybe I will be back again [today] for the USCIS session, and then I will be ready to file the petitions, just to be sure about the filing," he said.

He said he just learned about the USCIS session yesterday morning, when his wife read the newspaper. Dela Cruz said he will personally file the form, instead of availing of the services of a document handling firm.

Some document handling firms on Saipan charge $150 to $200 per employee covered by a CW petition they help file on behalf of employers. Some charge less, while others charge more.

Steve Jang, owner of Rainbow Color and the soon to be launched Gentle Care Home Health Care agency, said he already knows much about the CW petition process but it's always good to "learn more" about it.

"It's always nice to come out, learn more, and listen to other peoples' concerns. What USCIS has been doing is definitely beneficial to employers. It's better to hear information directly from USCIS," he said.

Jang said employers should make it a point to attend the USCIS sessions to be able to file the forms themselves instead of paying others to do it for them.

"The form is pretty much straightforward. If you listen carefully to USCIS, you can fill out the form and submit it yourself," he said.

Maribel Bulong, manager at Saipan Zoo, said she's thankful for USCIS' clarifications on a lot of issues related to the filing of Form I-129CW.

"We're now more prepared and confident about submitting the petitions," she said. "We were able to get clarifications. For example, we learned that police clearance and photos are not really required."

Joy Sanchez, manager at Marianas Medical Center, said they were supposed to file the CW petitions yesterday but decided to hold off on it until they're able to attend the USCIS session.

She said Marianas Medical Center is about to file six petitions for nine beneficiaries, plus two dependents.

Angie Mamaril, accountant at Hardt Eye Clinic, said the USCIS session will help them file this week six petitions for 10 beneficiaries plus one dependent.

Besides the USCIS sessions at the American Memorial Park, Gulick said there will also be "webinars" or public session via web conferencing on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

Gulick reminded employers to follow the instructions in filing Form I-129CW, answer the form the best they can, make sure the checks are correct, and file the petitions before Nov. 28, among other things.

He said the USCIS California Service Center will be ready to handle a surge in the number of petitions to be filed close to the deadline.

"Even if we have 10,000 envelopes on Nov. 29 to open up...they [Service Center] would be prepared for it," he said.

At yesterday's session, Gulick reiterated that those whose H1B application has been denied can be petitioned for CW but such petition should be filed immediately.

"That's our best answer at the moment," he added.

At the session, Gulick said employers should respond to request for evidence immediately upon receipt of the notice. If employers fail to promptly comply with the request, they will have to start over again with their petition for that particular beneficiary or petition.

The final rule governing foreign workers in the CNMI, published in the Sept. 7 Federal Register, creates a Commonwealth-only worker (CW) status that will allow foreign workers to remain in the CNMI until the end of the transition period on Dec. 31, 2014.

A foreign worker should already have a CW permit—or their application should already be in process by Nov. 27, 2011, or they could face deportation.

A CW petition is filed by employers on behalf of foreign workers who are not eligible for H1B and other INA visa or classifications.

ing Group Inc. recommended that the new LEAC rate take effect on Nov. 17, 2011.

In their joint stipulation presented to CPUC chair Viola Alepuyo yesterday, the two asked that the existing LEAC rate of $0.34426 per kilowatt-hour be lowered to $0.30791 per kWh.

The proposed new charge is composed of the following elements: fuel and lube oil element ($0.28761); volatility allowance for uncertainty of fuel price ($0.01783); and regulatory/technical support ($0.00247).

According to Georgetown consultant Larry R. Gawlik, the new LEAC rate will reduce utility bills by 10.7 percent, particularly among the vast majority of CUC residential customers who consume an average volume of less than 500 kWh a month. He estimates residential customers in this category to comprise about 70 percent of all CUC customers.

Customers using twice the average kilowatt-hour, meantime, will see a decrease of about 10 percent in their monthly billing. The rest of CUC's customers, including government and commercial businesses, are projected to see an 8.8-percent decrease in their monthly billing.

Prior to yesterday's public hearing, the celebration of Mass.

The last time changes were made to the Roman Missal was in 1975, as originally promulgated by Pope Pius V in 1570. The new alterations, spearheaded by a committee of specialists that worked under a Vatican directive, intend to make the English translation consistently reflect the original Latin text.

Changes are scattered in different parts of the Mass, from the Penitential Act and Nicene Creed to the Apostle's Creed and the Mystery of Faith. In the past, when the priest greets his congregation "The Lord be with you," the Catholic believers will now respond with "and with your spirit" instead of "and also with you."

The CNMI, a predominantly Catholic island community, has been primed for the coming of these changes since April, said Fr. Ryan Jimenez, apostolic administrator for the Diocese of Chalan Kanoa, who added that they have been working with the Archdiocese of Agaña on this matter.

Jimenez, in an email response to Saipan Tribune, said that Fr. Ike Ayuyu and Fr. Celso Magbanua serve as coordinators for these efforts, conducting a series of workshops to prepare the clergy and parishioners for the changes.

"We are ready and, in fact, some parishes have already implemented

CUC filed a petition seeking a rate reduction of only 4 percent—from the existing LEAC rate of $0.34426 per kWh to $0.33040 per kWh. Georgetown, however, also earlier filed a different rate reduction—from $0.34426 per kWh to $0.30370 per kWh—based on a lower projected cost of diesel oil and improvements made in the production efficiencies at CUC power plants.

Saipan Tribune learned that the new 10.7 percent rate cut was finalized yesterday morning after a series of meetings and consultations between CUC and Georgetown.

According to the joint stipulation, the proposed rate represents the required fuel and lube oil-related expenditures estimated for the period from Nov. 1, 2011, to Jan. 31, 2012.

The CPUC, which only has Alepuyo as its sole member, is expected to decide on the proposal at a meeting later this week.

CUC's monthly electric charges are composed of two rates: the base rate, which pays for the day-to-day operations, personnel, and construction of CUC, and the LEAC rate, which pays for the cost of diesel fuel needed to generate electricity. LEAC charges comprise 75 to 80 percent of total monthly bills.

The CPUC last approved a 22-percent increase in the LEAC rate in April this year, following unprecedented increases in world oil prices.

changes in some aspects of the Mass as a way of catechizing the faithful and to get the 'feel' of what it would be like come Nov. 27," said Jimenez.

Jimenez disclosed that the full text of the Mass in Chamorro is now set, thanks to bishop emeritus Tomas Camacho who made the necessary changes in the translation.

The Tagalog translation for the Filipino community, however, is not yet ready. Jimenez said this will come from the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines.

"So for the 11am Tagalog Sunday Masses at the Cathedral, Sunday 6pm in Kristo Rai, and Saturday 6pm in San Francisco de Borja, we will be using the same Filipino Roman Missal until the new one is ready," he added.

While adjustments need to be made by both parishioners and the clergy, Jimenez noted that these changes are "a sign of growth in Catholic Church."

"Constant updating is always good," said Jimenez. "The new translation is based on the original Latin translation of the Mass and theologians, liturgists linguists, and the bishops worked together in updating the New Roman Missal."

The apostolic administrator encouraged the Catholic faithful to "embrace" these changes and to learn more about them and not just because they are mandated.

"Our attitude should be to have a 'faith that seeks understanding,'" Jimenez concluded.

More rebate/refund checks released on non-payroll weeks

By HAIDEE V. EUGENIO

REPORTER

Taxpayers may have to be a bit patient waiting for their 2010 rebate/refund checks.

Press secretary Angel Demapan said yesterday that the Department of Finance has been releasing close to $500,000 worth of checks every non-payroll week, and smaller batches on payroll weeks.

While the administration has yet to provide information as to the total amount of rebate/refund checks issued since middle of October, Demapan said "the administration will work diligently to ensure the timely release of such checks."

Some taxpayers have been hoping to receive their rebate/refund checks either before Thanksgiving or before Christmas.

A 54-year-old San Jose resident said the few hundred dollars she expects to receive in refund/rebate will go toward household obligations, and not for buying new stuff.

"I hope to receive it before December," she said.

Others were able to receive their checks in mid-October, when the Department of Finance mailed out some $1 million worth of rebate, refund, and federal stimulus checks.

After the initial release of the first batch of some 1,000 checks, the following batches have since been issued every two weeks on an increment of close to $500,000 or less, so taxpayers may just have to wait for their turn to get their checks.

The Fitial administration is looking at the release of a total of 12,000 checks amounting to $7 million to $8 million by December, including the ones that were already mailed out starting in October.

A refund is for tax that has been overpaid or incorrectly paid, and is returned to the taxpayer, while rebate is for tax properly paid and is subsequently returned to the taxpayer under a rebate provision.

Manglona resets hearing in lawsuit vs CW rule

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE

REPORTER

U.S. District Court for the NMI Chief Judge Ramona V. Manglona has ordered a new hearing date for the lawsuit that seeks to stop federal officials from enforcing the CNMI-only Transitional Worker final rule on Nov. 28, 2011.

Manglona ordered yesterday that the hearing on the motion for a preliminary injunction scheduled for Nov. 22, 2011, be reset to Nov. 29, 2011.

Manglona set the new schedule at the request of the parties in the lawsuit.

She gave the plaintiffs until yesterday, Nov. 14, to file their legal brief and any exhibits in support of their motion for a preliminary injunction.

The defendants, on the other hand, were given until Nov. 21 to file their legal brief and any exhibits in opposition to the motion. The plaintiffs are given until Nov. 23 to file any reply.

Attorney Stephen C. Woodruff, counsel for plaintiffs, and Theodore W. Atkinson, senior litigation counsel of the Department of Justice Office of Immigration Litigation - District Court Section, submitted yesterday the agreement to modify the briefing schedule and postpone the hearing.

The plaintiffs in the case are Bonifacio V. Sagana, Manuel T. Vilaga, Gerardo G. De Guzman, Hector T. Sevilla, Carlito J. Marquez, Eduardo M. Elenzano, and Jong Ho Lee.

They want the court to declare the implementation of the CW final rule as unlawful and exceeds the defendants' constitutional and statutory authority.

Vilaga is a U.S. citizen, while Lee is a U.S. permanent resident. The other plaintiffs are long-term nonresident workers who mostly have U.S. citizen children.

Respondents in the case are Department of Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services District Director David Gulick, U.S. Labor Secretary Hilda L. Solis, and U.S. Department of Labor District Director Terrence Trotter.

The administration of Gov. Benigno R. Fitial also previously filed a lawsuit in an attempt to block the federal takeover of the local immigration system.

In November 2009, U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia Judge Paul L. Friedman upheld the constitutionality of the law that applies federal immigration laws to the CNMI.

House Vice Speaker Felicidad Ogumoro (Cov-Saipan) and House minority leader Joseph Deleon Guerrero (R-Saipan) are in Kosrae in the Federated States of Micronesia for the 52nd Association of Pacific Island Legislatures' board of directors meeting.

The Nov. 15 to 17 APIL meeting is focused on economic development programs, health and environmental protection and conservation, youth programs, and other regional issues.

Ogumoro said she will be off-island until Nov. 21, while Deleon Guerrero, until Nov. 19. The two will be missing today's House session.

Senate President Paul Manglona (Ind-Rota) said he's not aware if any senator went to the APIL meet.

During the last APIL General Assembly in Palau in June this year, the CNMI sent about a dozen lawmakers and Legislative Bureau staffers.

The CNMI will host the 31st APIL General Assembly on Saipan next year. APIL members are American Samoa, Guam, the CNMI, FSM, Kiribati, the Marshall Islands, Nauru, Palau, and Hawaii. (Haidee V. Eugenio)

'Mrs. Pai was charged only because she is Mike Pai's wife'

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE

REPORTER

The only reason Joanna C. Pai has been charged with utility theft is because she is married to Public Auditor Michael Pai, who has attracted the ire of Attorney General Edward T. Buckingham, according to former AG Rexford C. Kosack.

"These facts have been well-reported in the press and need not be relied on for Mrs. Pai to prevail in this case, at least at this stage of the proceedings," said Kosack in Mrs. Pai's motion to dismiss the case.

Kosack, counsel for Mrs. Pai, filed yesterday the motion to dismiss and a motion for discovery.

At yesterday's arraignment, Mrs. Pai pleaded not guilty to one count of theft of utility services. She is being accused of stealing utility services amounting to over $51,000.

Presiding Judge Robert Nara-ja set a status conference on Nov. 22 at 1:30pm.

In the motion to dismiss, Kosack said this motion will show that Mrs. Pai has not committed the offense under either the facts or the law alleged in the information.

First, Kosack pointed out, the facts alleged do not state an offense. The information, he said, alleges that Mrs. Pai received the benefit of a theft of utility services.

"It does not allege that she committed the theft," Kosack said.

Kosack also noted that the government should be aware of the fact that Mrs. Pai is not a customer as the utility account is in the name of another person.

"While it is alleged that Mrs. Pai received the benefit of a theft of utility services, it does not allege that she committed the theft, and it does not even allege she had any knowledge that the utility services had been stolen," he said.

The lawyer said the information essentially charges Mrs. Pai with nothing more than the alleged innocent receipt of stolen utility services.

According to the information, on Aug. 30, 2011, on Saipan, Joanna Pai "unlawfully committed the offense of theft of utility services where the theft accrued to her benefit."

Georgetown lawyer, CUC chief in heated discussion on fees

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Commonwealth Utilities Corp. executive director Abe Utu Malae and Georgetown Consulting Group Inc. counsel Robert Torres exchanged barbed words yesterday at the Public Utilities Commission meeting during discussions on the regulatory fees being assessed and charged the agency.

Georgetown is a consultant of the Commonwealth Public Utilities Commission but it is paid by CUC based on fees assessed by the commission. CUC also pays for its own consultant, economists.com.

The discussion's flashpoint was triggered by talks about the abolition of the levelized energy adjustment clause, LEAC, and replacing it with the monthly fuel adjustment clause, or MFAC. The LEAC, which reflects the cost of fuel, is reviewed every six months. MFAC will change excess of the amount of $51,000, the charging information states.

Saipan Tribune learned from a source that the alleged theft involved Commonwealth Utilities Corp.'s power services.

this to every month so it could provide immediate relief to customers in case fuel prices drop.

Malae supports the MFAC proposal, describing the measure as a reflection of "reality" and would be helpful to customers. He also took exception to Georgetown's fees, saying they are too high for a small utility firm like CUC.

Torres emphasized that Georgetown was instrumental in developing the LEAC process, which he claims was not even created by the previous CUC management.

"CUC, under previous management, doesn't even know how to come up with a LEAC rate. Georgetown assisted CUC with this LEAC process. This history is important because this is highly technical part," he said.

Torres said the current LEAC is not a perfect process because it involves several technical issues that require expertise. LEAC, he added, also exists in other jurisdictions and he believes it provides transparency in CUC's operation.

He also defended Georgetown's fees, saying all fees paid by CUC are assessed by the commission and are based on law.

Malae disagreed.

"Rather than assessing over a long period of time of six months, why not do it in a monthly basis to reflect the actual price of our fuel delivery? Sorry, Mr. Torres but I can't take your arguments too seriously because you are the attorney for the consultant. If you go to the Legislature and talk to them how bad the impact is, I am looking at your own motives or your personal interests in this matter. I can't take it [your statements]," said Malae, adding that the regulatory fees are just too high for CUC.

Malae and Torres tried to interrupt each other, finally forcing Alepuyo to order them both to stop.

"Hang on, hang on, hang on. Stop! Stop! I am not going to listen to it! It's not going to happen. If anybody knows what's public comments are for, it would be unfair for me to continue this. It's not a process for back-and-forth arguments. You have that opportunity before you brought your stipulation here. Let me assure the members of the public that with regards to regulatory costs, CPUC is very mindful what the costs are from the beginning and we always tried to bring that down," she said, before ordering a recess.

CUC earlier disclosed that Georgetown has billed CUC a total of $1.2 million in fees and expenses since December 2008.

Rep. Palacios pleads not guilty

Rep. Raymond D. Palacios entered yesterday a not-guilty plea in the Superior Court to charges that he sold $200 worth of crystal methamphetamine or "ice."

During his arraignment, Palacios, through his counsel, Edward Arriola Sr., waived the reading of the information and his constitutional rights.

Palacios pleaded not guilty to the information charging him with trafficking and illegal possession of controlled substance.

Presiding Judge Robert Naraja set a status conference for Jan. 10, 2012.

Palacios, 48, is out on bail after posting $3,000 cash and $27,000 unsecured bond. Police arrested the lawmaker on Oct. 28.

According to police reports, members of the Drug Enforcement Task Force and DPS Criminal Investigation Bureau used a confidential source to buy a total of $200 worth of "ice" from Palacios in two transactions that occurred on Oct. 19, 2011. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Veterans town hall meet tomorrow

By CLARISSA V. DAVID
clarissa_david@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Veterans, Reservists, and National Guardsmen on Saipan and their families are encouraged to attend an outreach event that aims to inform them about their health benefits.

The Saipan Veterans Town Hall Meet is slated for Nov. 16, Wednesday, from 5pm to 6:30pm at the American Memorial Park Visitors Center.

Ruth Coleman of the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs Health Administration for the Pacific Island Health Care System made the announcement during the Veterans Day Ceremony at the American Memorial Park's Court of Honor on Nov. 11.

"The purpose of the meeting is you asking questions on how to access your health benefits. The setting is going to be very comfortable so please, if you have time, come," said Coleman, adding that the meeting will be a question-and-answer format.

Coleman said the event is also an opportunity for veterans and their families to get to know more about the Saipan Veterans Affairs Outreach Clinic.

"We haven't done a ribbon cutting yet but it's operational and we're getting it cranking and going," she said. "The state office and the Department of Veterans Affairs are working hand in hand to make sure that our veterans are taken care of."

For more information, visit the clinic at Suite 100 and 206 at the Marina Heights II Building or call 322-0035.

Zoning issues 15 notices of violations

By CLARISSA V. DAVID
REPORTER

The Zoning Office has issued 15 notices of violation to businesses and households that do not comply with the Public Nuisance and Signs requirement under the zoning law, from the time it started the issuance of notices on Nov. 7.

Of the 15 notices, eight were issued for hanging clothes in public view while seven were issued for other reasons, including obstruction on sidewalks, parking areas and front yards, trash bins placed on a public street, and construction without permits.

Acting Zoning administrator Therese T. Ogomoro said some of the places that were pre-screened or identified for possible notices "had cleaned up prior to the Nov. 7 enforcement date."

Ogomoro said that those who receive the notices are given 24 hours upon receipt to comply with the law.

Public nuisance is defined under the Saipan Zoning Law of 2008 as "an unreasonable interference with a right common to the general public." It "does not change its character by reason of its location on private or public property, occupied or unoccupied property."

Examples of public nuisance are vegetation obstructing the safe passage or sight of motorists or pedestrians at an intersection or any street or sidewalk; abandoned vehicles or appliances in public view; a building or structure in such dilapidated condition that it presents a fire hazard or a menace to the health of the public; and laundry hung outside on a balcony, terrace, porch, deck, or veranda within the view of the public, particularly in the tourism related districts zoned as Garapan Core, Garapan East, and some areas on Middle Road and Beach Road.

"If they don't comply, then we'll enforce up to $200 of fine per day as written in the [notice that] they signed," Ogomoro told Saipan Tribune.

Ogomoro said those who received notices "can ask for an informal compliance meeting with the acting administrator or a formal hearing with the Zoning board to appeal the notice issued by the acting administrator."

She noted, however, that the request for a meeting or hearing "does not stop the notice from being effective."

She said they will follow up on the areas where they issued notices and will visit more areas within the week.

"We urge the public to continue their efforts in cleaning up and promoting the value of our island," added Ogomoro.

7TH YEAR IN A ROW!

MEI's Norita gets national certification

Melonie Norita has become the fifth technician at Marianas Eye Institute to receive her nationally recognized degree as a "certified ophthalmic assistant" or "COA" from the Joint Commission on Allied Health Personnel in Ophthalmology.

She joins the original technicians at Marianas Eye Institute—Emilly Taitano, Lin Muleta and Thelma Tenorio, and Joanne Castro-Pangelinan—as the only certified ophthalmic assistants in the CNMI. The staff of Marianas Eye Institute has collectively received a total of 10 nationally recognized certifications—more than any other eye clinic in the region. In addition to certified ophthalmic assistants, the staff has earned national credentials as certified opticians, certified contact lens fitters, and certified ophthalmic coders.

"The on-the-job training program at Marianas Eye Institute has allowed these talented individuals to gain the skills and knowledge needed to pass this nationally recognized certification," said Dr. David Khorram. "They are proof of what hard work and focused effort can accomplish, and we are very proud of Melonie for passing this rigorous exam."

The exam that Norita passed covers 19 knowledge areas, including history taking, equipment maintenance and repair, microbiology, pharmacology, surgical assisting, ophthalmic imaging, patient education, spectacle skills, refractometry, lensometry, visual assessment and medical ethics, legal and regulatory issues.

"When I saw Melonie's scores on each section, I was impressed that in several areas she answered every single question correctly, and received a score of 100 percent for those sections," said Khorram. "She knows her stuff."

Norita graduated from Marianas High School and has been employed at Marianas Eye Institute since 1999. "It's hard for me to believe that when I started at Marianas Eye Institute, I really knew nothing about the eyes. Now, I'm nationally certified. I'm very happy," said Norita.

"When we take out staff to large conferences, they recognize that their experience at Marianas Eye Institute has given them a breadth of knowledge that few technicians, even in the U.S. possess," added Russ Quinn, CEO. "Our clinic is part of one of the most important networks performing groundbreaking research in diabetic eye disease. So our staff gets very in-depth experience with eye care and diabetes. We've been hailed by Retinal Physician magazine as one of the best equipped eye clinics in the Asia-Pacific region, so we know that our staff are getting experience with some of the most advanced technologies in eye care."

"Our doctors, Dr. Khorram and Dr. [Mark] Robertson, have both received national recognition within their fields, and so we know our staff have great teachers," Quinn said. "All of these combine to prepare our staff not only to pass an important exam, but to provide outstanding care to the people we serve every day."

Marianas Eye Institute is located on Beach Road in Gapan across 13 Fishermen Monument. For more information, call 235-9090 or visit www.MarianasEye.com. (PR)

Parent Take Over Day at Kagman High

The students, teachers and staff of Kagman High School is inviting the community to attend the first ever PSS-wide Parent Take Over Day on Nov. 17, 2011. Parent Take Over Day is happening all over the nation at schools in celebration of Education Month.

Parents are invited to help teach classes or shadow your child on this day. You may choose to come for the whole day, or only the part of the day. Student leaders and teachers have collaborated on lessons and will help facilitate the classes. Topics that will be taught this day all represent the KHS mission and purpose. Parents may also teach about special talents or skills they have such as weaving, carpentry or music.

Parents who attend this event will be earning points for their child's class of the year title. Each year, all four of the classes vie for the highest honors of class of the year. For more information, call 237-3840 or email kagmanhs@gmail.com. (PR)

Kagman High to issue report cards on Thursday

Kagman High School is issuing all report cards home on Thursday, Nov. 17. It will be a full-day schedule on that day because the school will not be passing out report cards in the afternoon. Instead, students will take their report cards home that night to share their first quarter grades with their parents. Parents are reminded to have their children show them their grades! The school will have its Parent Takeover Day later that same day. For more information, call 237-3840. (PR)

Gumataotao assumes command of Carrier Strike Group 11

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Guam Delegate Madeleine Z. Bordallo

issued the following statement Friday regarding Rear Admiral Peter Gumataotao's assignment as the Commander of Carrier Strike Group 11 in San Diego, California. He previously served as the Commander of Navy Region Korea; Commander, U.S. Naval Forces Korea; and Commander, Navel Component, U.S. Forces Korea, United Nations Command, Korea.

"I congratulate Rear Admiral Peter Gumataotao on assuming command of Carrier Strike Group Eleven," said Bordallo. "Admiral Gumataotao is the first Chamorro flag officer to command a carrier battle group, and he will also be the first Chamorro in the Navy to reach a two-star rank as part of his accepting this new assignment. As the Commander of Strike Group 11, Admiral Gumataotao will oversee the USS Nimitz and several other combat and support ships. I commend Admiral Gumataotao for his leadership and dedicated service to our nation, and I join the people of Guam in congratulating him on his new assignment." (PR)

HHS awards Guam $73,684

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has awarded $73,684 to the Guam Department of Public Health and Social Services. This discretionary grant will benefit the Maternal and Child Health services division of DPHSS.

DPHSS's Maternal and Child Health division is responsible for ensuring quality and accessible health care services for Guam's women and children. These services include a Women's Health Clinic, Child Health Clinic, Children with Special Health Care Needs Clinic, and District Nursing Services. Additionally, the division develops comprehensive and coordinated care systems of services for women and children.

"The Maternal and Child Health division coordinates local programs that promote the health and well-being of Guam's female, infant, and child population," said Guam Delegate Madeleine Z. Bordallo. "This federal grant will be used to help the Maternal and Child Health division carry out its mission and improve healthcare services provided to women and children on our island." (PR)

Low retention rate alarms NMC

The Northern Marianas College is devising plans to investigate the steady decline in the college's student retention rate, which is approximately at 27 percent against the 40 to 45 percent average retention rate based on national norms. NMC's Office of Institutional Effectiveness, the Counseling Center, and the Office of Admissions, Records and Financial Aid has forged an alliance to probe the reasons behind the dismal student retention figures in efforts to stem tide. According to Ms. Julie Ulloa-Heath, Office of Institutional Effectiveness director, the key departments are set to launch the NMC Retention Program where they will administer satisfaction surveys aimed at stimulating clearer answers as to why a significant percentage of NMC freshmen do not return to the college for their sophomore year.

SESAP seeks BOE help to boost special ed

The Special Education State Advisory Panel has called on members of the State Board of Education to address what panel members called as "atrocious" situation of Northern Marianas' special education that has denied over 270 students with disabilities of unique educational services. SESAP Chair Ted Seaman appealed to BOE members to have more active involvement in uplifting the quality of services offered to special education students and to expedite the selection of advisory panel members that would finally complete SESAP. "We need authorities to pronounce SESAP as a legitimate panel working for the improvement of CNMI's special education," said Mr. Seaman.

$356K earmarked for road projects

The Tenorio administration yesterday approved the reallocation of some $356,399 for various road paving and road improvement projects on Saipan. This came about after Gov. Pedro P. Tenorio signed into law two bills—House Bill 12-304 and House Local Bill 12-46—authorizing the said reappropriation. Under House Bill 12-304, about $106,399 that was left over from Public Law 9-24 will be realigned to pave the road from the Saipan International School to the Saipan International Airport. The local bill, meanwhile, reallocates some $200,000 from the Developer Infrastructure Tax and $50,000 from the slot machine licensing fees to pave and improve the Sadog Tasi and Chalan Kiya roads.

CNMI urged: Explore other tour markets

Public Relations firm Starr Seigle Communication underscored the need to diversify the CNMI's tourism market in light of Japan's contracting economy. Starr Seigle Senior Vice President Charlotte Vick said that, with the Japan economy still recovering from the Asian crisis, the Northern Marianas should tap the potentials of other emerging markets in the region. Vick listed Hong Kong, Singapore, and Taiwan as possible markets that can help revive the Commonwealth's travel sector. She said Korea and China are doing well.

Prioritize sewer line projects, CUC urged

Environmental Protection Agency officials expect the Commonwealth Utilities Corporation to prioritize the construction of sewer lines throughout the CNMI, noting that delays would adversely affect the CNMI's groundwater. "I think, ideally, we'd like to see more people connected to the sewer system. First of all we'd like to see fewer people using septic tanks because it gets back to the groundwater (when not pumped on time). Having connected to the sewer line is going to ultimately protect the precious groundwater," EPA manager for the Pacific John McCarroll said in a media briefing Wednesday. EPA CNMI program manager Pat Young, in the same occasion, said that amid the lack of funding, the CUC should look for alternative sources to prioritize sewer line projects.

NMI gets $368K in new grants

Gov. Juan N. Babauta on Wednesday accepted three grants from the Department of Justice totaling $368,000, which are being touted to go a long way in improving the criminal and justice system in the Commonwealth. The three grants consisted of the National Criminal History Improvement Program grant, amounting to $285,000; the renewal of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Title V program grant, $33,000; and the Statistical Analysis Center grant from the Bureau of Justice Statistics, $50,000. Babauta commended Criminal Justice Planning Agency director Doris Pladevega for her work in securing the grants.

Int'l development promotes American jobs and national security

By BOB RABATSKY

MCCLATCHY-TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

With congressional budget negotiators seeking $1.2 trillion in savings, some Americans question why the United States should be spending money on foreign assistance when we have pressing needs at home. As someone who has dedicated his career to international development, I assure you that cutting foreign assistance would do more harm than good.

When tallying the bottom line, Congress should consider the full price tag: our foreign assistance creates jobs at home by boosting exports and protects our national security by making friends and strengthening economies in emerging societies. Considering how U.S. foreign aid advances America's diplomatic, economic, national security and humanitarian objectives, it also delivers a great return on the tax dollar—for less than 1 percent of the total federal budget.

With job creation becoming more dependent on expanding American exports overseas, international aid efforts are one of our country's most effective ways to promote economic growth. Over 50 percent of U.S. foreign trade is with developing countries that are U.S. foreign assistance partners, and 11 of our top 15 trading partners are graduates of U.S. foreign assistance programs. A recent GAO study on U.S.-funded programs focusing on trade development in emerging markets found that for every one dollar spent on these programs resulted in a $53 increase in merchandise exports for the United States. Both Republicans and Democrats should be able to support spending that generates these kinds of return!

U.S. development programs also win friends for our country in poverty-stricken—and often unstable—societies that are in danger of falling into hostile hands, from rogue regimes to terrorist groups. The link between American money and American lives could not be clearer. As former Secretary of Defense Robert Gates said last year, "Development is a lot cheaper than sending soldiers." The State Department estimates that for every four dollars spent on development and diplomacy in Afghanistan, the Defense Department will save $45—again, smart spending for us taxpayers.

My company, Fintrac, is contracted by the U.S. Agency for International Development to improve the lives of farmers in developing countries. Our work improves food security, increases income and opportunities for jobs for the rural poor in these countries, and creates a more secure world for both the communities we assist and for us here at home.

For example, Fintrac has been supporting Honduras' agriculture sector for over a decade, dramatically increasing farmers' incomes and improving their families' standard of living. When we began working with the Vasquez brothers, they had four young families working a small plot of land in the middle of the country, subsisting on $1,000 per year. Under pressure to pay bills and keep their land, the brothers would take great personal risk to migrate into the United States illegally to find seasonal work to supplement their farm income. After receiving assistance from our project, productivity from the farm increased tenfold as they produced vegetables for the local market. The brothers are now using their increased earnings to pay off debt, send their children to school, and invest in expanding their farm. They no longer need to take the risk of traveling to the United States in search of work.

Job creation in developing countries not only creates new markets for our goods and services, it reduces inward migration and

Relief from removal: Outside experts, and a very brief overview “Removal” is the nice, neutral word currently used instead of the uglier—and more realistic—traditional term “deportation.” With Nov. 28 only two weeks away, the fear of removal is looming larger and larger in many people's minds. This is especially true after a couple of non-CNMI immigration attorneys, one a recognized immigration expert in California, telecopter in via various media. Many of the things these attorneys are reported to have said are absolutely correct: every alien in the CNMI who may be facing removal has an absolute right to due process. There are a number of defenses to removal and strategies on when and how to use those defenses. Although there will be no mass roundups no matter how many rumors there are to the contrary (and no matter how many misguided statements by misguided local officials), it is certain that there will be a lot of removal cases brought before the Immigration Court, enough to seriously strain the legal resources currently available to the public. And those legal resources are small: few CNMI attorneys handle immigration matters, and fewer still are involved in removal cases.

But some of these experts' statements betray a lack of familiarity with facts and conditions on the ground here in the CNMI. While CNMI attorneys may not have the same depth of experience in removal proceedings as these outside attorneys, by the same token, neither of these experts has experience with the transition mandated by the Consolidated Natural Resources Act (“CNRA”, aka the “federalization law”) and the way that transition has played out so far, day by day and month by month. Neither expert has spent the past three and a half years meeting with the people most affected by the CNRA, in large groups, as families and as individuals. Neither can be familiar with the former CNMI immigration scheme (and its deportation statute, modeled on U.S. law), and how the CNMI scheme still affects the transition to U.S. immigration law. We understand that the California practitioner expects to visit the CNMI very soon. We hope that he will meet with us; we think the exchange of information and ideas will be mutually beneficial for our clients.

For the rest of today's column we will very briefly describe some of the most common defenses to removal and the anticipated strains on the local legal system.

Defenses to removal (deportation): A short list

The most common forms of relief from removal are waivers of inadmissibility, excludability and removability, cancellation of re-

Special to the Saipan Tribune

Maya Kara is a native of Hungary and comes to the practice of law by way of her interest in Asian history. Bruce Mailman is a native of Bakersfield, California and was a private investigator in California prior to becoming a lawyer. Both have lived and practiced law in the CNMI for over 20 years, Maya in government service and Bruce in private practice. They are married and are partners in the law firm of Mailman & Kara, LLC in Garapan, Saipan.

removal, suspension of deportation, adjustment of status, asylum and withholding of deportation, legalization and registry, and voluntary departure. Not all are presently available in the CNMI.

Keep in mind that the statutes, regulations, defenses to removal and the resulting case law fill volumes. Today's column merely scratches the surface, with the broadest possible descriptions.

1. What relief from removal is not available in the CNMI, or is available to very few?

■ Asylum. The CNRA specifically prohibits asylum claims from being brought in the CNMI until January 2015. The authors of the CNRA instead mandated that the CNMI government's nonre-foulement refugee process that existed prior to Nov. 28, 2009, should continue until such time as asylum becomes available to persons in the CNMI. Under the CNMI process, individuals could apply for CNMI-only refugee status using United Nations refugee standards, and several CNMI assistant attorneys general were trained in the process, and as hearing officers. “Nonre-foulement” means that although people claiming to be refugees would not receive any permanent form of immigration status, they would be allowed to remain in the CNMI and would not be returned to their countries of origin.

Unfortunately, and notwithstanding the federal mandate that the program continue, the CNMI quietly terminated the program sometime before the 2009 transition date. Applicants for protection

Letters to the EditorUnwelcome surprise

This is in response to the health corp. stopping housing benefits: It is a shame that as an employee of the hospital and the new corporation, I am learning of the possibility of losing housing benefits via the newspaper. It would be more appropriate, in my opinion, that Mr. Torres share his thoughts directly with the staff that is affected rather than through a media outlet. In addition, most of the staff has never met Mr. Torres, nor know who he is. As a new corporation, we should be getting to know one another and handling our business internally rather than apparently communicating via third parties.

against refoulement, whose cases were not yet adjudicated, were left to an uncertain fate. We recently learned that these files are now with USCIS.

■ Cancellation of removal. Cancellation of removal comes in two flavors: for lawful permanent residents, or LPRs, and for non-LPRs. We believe that this form of relief, which was highlighted by the outside experts with whom we started this column, will be of limited utility in CNMI removal cases.

(a) For LPRs. An LPR facing removal is eligible for relief from removal if she or he has been an LPR for at least five years, has resided continuously in the U.S. for seven years before removal proceedings are brought, has not been convicted of an aggravated felony, and is not otherwise inadmissible to the U.S. Certain groups are ineligible for this form of relief. There are a number of factors that can favor relief, including family and community ties, hardship, good moral character, and a laundry list of others. Negative factors include bad character, criminal record, immigration violations, and the basis of the government's case.

(b) For non-LPRs. Non-LPRs must show physical presence in the U.S. for at least 10 years prior to the removal case, good moral character, etc. We are not going to detail the list, because it is our opinion that very few non-LPRs currently in the CNMI can show 10 years in the U.S. Persons in the CNMI have been "in the U.S." for immigration purposes only since Nov. 28, 2009, with the exceptions set out in Section 506 of the Covenant: U.S. citizens and their immediate relatives, to whom the full INA already applied once the citizenship sections of the Covenant went into effect, on Nov. 4, 1986.

There are individuals in the CNMI—chiefly people who qualified as immediate relatives of U.S. citizens who never became LPRs—who may make a claim to 10 years of continuous residence in the U.S. through the operation of Section 506. We cannot think of any other classes of people to whom this qualification might apply. We did consider the Sabangan decision, which held that notwithstanding the citizenship sections of the Covenant, persons born in the CNMI between Jan. 9, 1978, and Nov. 4, 1986, were declared U.S. citizens by operation of the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. But Sabangan does not directly deal with the immigration laws of the U.S., and we think it is inapplicable to aid a cancellation of removal defense.

Cancellation of removal for non-LPRs requires a showing of "exceptional and extremely unusual hardship"—a very difficult standard to meet—that removal would create for the applicant's U.S. citizen spouse, children, or parents.

■ Suspension of Deportation. A successful suspension of deportation application results in LPR status for the applicant. Because the initial requirement is continuous physical presence in the U.S. for at least seven years, we think its application will be limited to the same possible class of individuals—in terms of duration of presence in the CNMI—as cancellation of removal. The other requirements are good moral character and a showing of "extreme hardship" to the applicant's U.S. citizen or LPR spouse, children, or parents if the applicant is removed. It is worth noting that cancellation of removal and suspension of deportation can only be granted to 4,000 individuals in any one fiscal year (Oct. 1 to Sept. 30) in the entire United States.

■ Registry. Aliens of good character who have resided continuously in the U.S. since before Jan. 1, 1972, who are not otherwise deportable and potentially eligible for citizenship, may be registered as LPRs. We see this as a very limited form of relief because (a) there are very few aliens who have been in the CNMI that long (and

Late checks again

SHEFA and CNMI Scholarship Office are late again and it is very understandable given the financial situation of our government. The late checks means that most students depending on these checks were not able to register and those who did are being charged late fees. Our students are the future professionals of the CNMI and they now need the help and assistance of SHEFA and CNMI Scholarship to register or to prevent them from paying additional "late fees" for registration.

I know Boise State and other colleges are willing to waive the late fees if they get a letter from the scholarship providers explaining it is not the student's fault for the late payment and assuring the institutions that the payment will be made. The SHEFA and CNMI Scholarship offices could do a big service to the students by sending a simple letter to the colleges and universities. The colleges and universities are listed with SHEFA and the CNMI Scholarship offices and it may be possible to send the letter to the school and/or remember that most Trust Territory citizens present in the CNMI on Nov. 4, 1986, became U.S. citizens), and (b) those aliens who have been here since before Jan. 1, 1972, who remain aliens, cannot claim to have been "in the U.S." for the requisite period of time.

2. So what relief from removal is available?

■ Adjustment of status. Other than simple dismissal and termination of a removal case, adjustment of status is the best possible result. There may be many grounds of eligibility for adjustment of status. We have had success with this defense, in that a removal case was recently dismissed against a client of ours, after USCIS (in a normal, non-immigration court interview) approved her husband's I-130 petition for her as his wife. The immigration prosecutor then obtained a dismissal, and our client will soon have a second USCIS interview, to adjudicate her I-485 application to adjust status.

■ Withholding of deportation (aka withholding of removal). Withholding of removal is similar to asylum and requires similar grounds (summarized as "a well-founded fear of persecution") but unlike asylum it is not barred by the CNRA, and we are aware of CNMI cases where it has been successfully argued. Withholding of removal is found in the Immigration & Nationality Act under the heading, "Restriction on Removal to a Country Where Alien's Life or Freedom Would be Threatened."

Asylum is preferred over withholding of removal for several reasons: Asylum leads to a grant of LPR status, and withholding of removal does not; a grant of withholding of removal requires a specific order of removal; it only prohibits the government from removing the alien to one particular country. Several groups—generally speaking, past persecutors, serious criminals and security risks—are barred from obtaining withholding of removal.

■ Waivers of excludability and deportability. Many grounds of inadmissibility or deportability, which are the bases for removal cases, can be overcome by an appropriate waiver application. We have had successful waiver applications within the context of USCIS applications, and all we will say here is that they are a technical area of law requiring a lot of work from both attorneys and clients.

■ Voluntary departure. Voluntary departure is only available to individuals who can show good moral character, are not deportable for "aggravated" reasons, and who agree to pay for their own tickets. This is a last-resort relief, but the removal respondent must determine that it is the only way, early in the process. If you have no defense to removal, and the immigration judge asks whether you will buy your own ticket or you want to government to pay your airfare, you are being given the choice between voluntary departure and removal. The upside? Voluntary departure is not removal, and the voluntarily departed are usually not barred from re-entering the U.S., assuming they can show they are admissible upon later application for admission. The downside? The voluntarily departed are gone.

Scarce legal resources

The outside experts' message, as reported in the media, is that aliens who may face removal proceedings should fight rather than just go home. That's a decision each affected alien must make for himself or herself, and only after getting good advice about his or her particular case.

Which brings us to another serious problem. As the California expert rightly pointed out, without some kind of funding, a lot of the removal defense work is going to take pro bono work—pro bono publico means "for the public good"—because of the scant economic resources of the people most likely subject to removal proceedings.

As noted above, there are relatively few members of the CNMI Bar Association who handle immigration matters, and fewer handling removal cases. Micronesian Legal Services has been do-students via email. The letter should be sufficient for most colleges and universities to waive the late charges.

I was going to write a personal letter to the scholarship offices but I'm sure this letter will get more respect, carry more weight and get more attention—no disrespect intended. I just pray the letters will be sent to help our youth and their parents if the checks are not ready. I do want to thank the government for responding so expeditiously when I previously protested and complained publicly about the checks. I just hope some of my former government students can remember their critical lesson on "the power of protest" in U.S. government and took notice because it proved that one person (a voting citizen) can still make a difference even in this part of America. I would protest again but even I must be realistic in knowing our government is now dead broke and a protest can't change that overnight—but it can over time.

Ambrose M. Bennett

ing commendable work in this area, but the MLSC attorneys are stretched, and cannot ignore the other kinds of cases they are mandated to take. Maya has established an Immigration Section of the CNMI Bar, but the membership of the section is still small. To make matters worse, although the private attorneys in the CNMI Bar are only between 17-18 percent of the entire CNMI Bar membership, they are required to take 100 percent of the Superior Court's appointed cases in criminal and some domestic matters. The burden on private attorneys has been heavy—Bruce once had a criminal case that required nearly 200 hours of his time, just for one example; the Bar and the Courts have spent years working on solutions, but nothing has yet been finalized.

What does that mean? It means that if there is a serious increase in removal cases, it may be hard for people to find legal representation. Respondents in removal cases are entitled to be represented by attorneys of their own choice—and but at their own expense. Because removal cases are not considered "criminal," despite the harshness of the result, there is no constitutional right to appointed counsel.

The bottom line

We don't think there will be any form of roundup, or massive institution of removal cases. Nor will USCIS send notices to appear to everyone who has been denied parole in place (a particularly vicious rumor that is apparently making the rounds). There is no "master list" of people deemed removable on Nov. 28. As a result of the recent "Morton memo," Department of Homeland Security has directed that ICE—Immigration and Customs Enforcement—concentrate on serious criminals and threats to national security first before proceeding to removal cases for ordinary citizens.

That doesn't mean that ordinary, law-abiding but removable individuals won't come to the attention of ICE. A professor Bruce studied under, in the late, lamented Graduate School of Criminology at Berkeley, once likened criminal activity to a radio. The louder it is, the more people hear and pay attention to it. That works for removal, even if removability is not a form of crime. So if you think you might be removable, don't draw attention to yourself. Stay under the radar, and be sure to fix those broken taillights before you go out at night.

competition for jobs here at home. These are two important reasons Congress and taxpayers should maintain a modest foreign aid budget.

America is safer and more prosperous because of the investment we make in helping people less fortunate than ourselves. We are not just helping a farm family in Honduras, we are building allies and trading partners that will help protect and grow our future. Foreign assistance funding in the federal budget is low, but the stakes are high, from our job security to our national security.

Leaders: Asia-Pacific free trade vital to recovery

KAPOLEI, Hawaii (AP)—Opening markets to freer trade is crucial to a lasting global economic recovery, Asia-Pacific leaders agreed Sunday as they wrapped up a summit that produced tangible progress toward a U.S.-backed regional trade bloc.

The plan to forge a Pacific free trade area got a big boost when leaders of Canada and Mexico joined Japan in expressing support for a deal that has received a cool reception from rising power China.

The news was a coup for President Barack Obama, who made progress on the pact one of his top priorities for the annual Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit, held in his home state of Hawaii. It comes after Japan, the world's No. 3 economy, said Friday it wants to join the nine nations already involved in talks on what has been dubbed the Trans-Pacific Partnership.

In their summit declaration, leaders of the 21-member APEC said the region is now the vanguard for global growth thanks to previous progress in forging closer economic ties and free trade.

The meeting at a time of uncertainty for the world economy has strengthened the group's commitment to cooperation, the statement said. Leaders also agreed on measures to promote green-based economic growth to ensure energy security.

"We continued our efforts to try to get the global economy to grow faster, the strong and balanced growth that we need," Obama said in a closing speech.

The balmy weather for the annual APEC gathering at a resort on the west side of the Hawaiian island of Oahu contrasted with deepening pessimism over the economic outlook as the leaders finished a day of talks on how to spur growth and create jobs. With Europe again on the brink of recession, Asia's vital role as a driver of global growth has gained even greater urgency.

IMF Director Christine Lagarde attended the summit, briefing the APEC leaders on the latest developments in Europe. The International Monetary Fund will play a key role in coming months in overseeing efforts by Italy, and other ailing economies that use the euro common currency, to rein in debt.

Europe's quandary was among the wide range of issues that the leaders tackled in their one-day meeting.

Some might wonder why Pacific Rim leaders would be discussing troubles on the other side of the globe, Obama said, answering that "If Europe has a major recession, that will have a direct impact on our growth and ability to create jobs."

The U.S. Trade Representative, Ron Kirk, welcomed the overtures from Canada and Mexico about joining the so called TPP, issuing a statement calling them America's "neighbors and largest export markets."

But China, which some economists say is on course to overtake the U.S. as the world's biggest economy this decade, has appeared reluctant to endorse the Pacific trade pact, likely wary of being drawn into what has become a U.S.-led initiative that encroaches on its own sphere of influence in Asia. China also has commitments to rival free trade blocs in East and Southeast Asia.

The TPP group now includes only four smaller, relatively affluent economies—Chile, New Zealand, Brunei and Singapore—but the U.S., Australia, Malaysia, Vietnam and Peru are negotiating to join.

U.S. officials have said all are welcome to come on board, while indicating that the agreement's high standards would pose a challenge to countries whose economies are not fully open. That would likely include Russia, which is close to gaining long-sought membership of the World Trade Organization, and China, which has staked out large sections of its economy for protection from foreign competition.

Obama has said he is optimistic that work on the American-backed trade pact could result in a legal framework by next year.

For the U.S., the initiative is seen as a way to break through bottlenecks and open new business opportunities. Many in APEC see the emerging deal as a building block for a free trade area that eventually encompasses all of Asia and the Pacific—covering half the world's commerce and two-fifths of its trade.

"The Asia Pacific region is absolutely critical to America's economic growth. We consider it a top priority. And we consider it a top priority because we're not going to be able to put our folks back to work and grow our economy and expand opportunity unless the Asia Pacific region is also successful," Obama told fellow leaders earlier Sunday.

Thomas Donohue, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, an influential business lobbying group, praised the Pacific trade initiative.

"An important step to unlocking global economic growth will be expanding trade in the Asia-Pacific, and the TPP holds this key," Donohue said. He urged the group to move quickly in drawing up a timeline that is "comprehensive, enforceable, and makes room for new entrants."

One of the highlights of the closed-door APEC talks is usually a "family photo," a ritual that has sometimes involved decking the often staid leaders in colorful shirts or other local fashions.

Despite speculation the leaders might don tropical-themed "Aloha" shirts or perhaps leis this time, they posed in their usual business attire—a reflection, perhaps, of the seriousness of their agenda.

"We're here for business. We're here to create jobs. We're here to promote exports, and we've got a tangible set of steps that have been taken," Obama said. "That's what responsible leadership is all about."

APEC joins economies, both huge and tiny, rich and poor. As always, the divergence between rich and developing economies—and between the U.S. and China—was apparent.

In Hawaii, Obama was also pushing hard on trade issues with China.

Before a meeting with Chinese President Hu Jintao on Saturday, Obama exhorted Beijing to "play by the rules," citing controls that keep China's currency undervalued as one example.

Japan's economy rises out of earthquake slump

TOKYO (AP)—Japan's economy surged 6 percent in the latest quarter in a bounce back from the earthquake and tsunami disaster that is unlikely to be sustained amid headwinds from Europe's debt crisis.

The Cabinet Office's real gross domestic product report Monday marks the first expansion for the world's No. 3 economy in four quarters. The result was in line with market forecasts, including Kyodo News agency's projection of 6.2 percent annualized growth for the July-September quarter.

The March 11 earthquake and tsunami killed thousands of people and wiped out large swathes of Japan's northeastern coast. The disasters damaged many factories in the region, causing severe shortages of parts and components for manufacturers across the country, including automakers.

The tsunami also crippled a nuclear power plant, adding to the difficulties faced by businesses and households.

Since then, the country has steadily restored its factories, helping the economy rebound despite the threats of a financial crisis in Europe, slowing global economy and a strong yen.

The Cabinet Office said the annualized figure translates to GDP growth of 1.5 percent from the previous quarter. GDP is a measure of the value of all goods and services produced domestically.

Consumer spending, which accounts for some 60 percent of the economy, climbed 1 percent from the previous quarter. Capital investment by companies rose 1.1 percent.

Analysts, however, say that the strong third quarter numbers are unlikely to last.

Credit Suisse economist Hiro-michi Shirakawa said Japan had benefited from a sharp increase in exports and industrial production into the early summer. But the economy has "already lost upward momentum since August," he said in a report last week.

He expects Japan's economy to weaken in coming months and forecasts GDP to contract in the fourth quarter.

United operates charter flights from four Chinese cities to Guam

» Offering 10 roundtrip plights from China during Chinese New Year season in 2010

GUAM—United Airlines, a wholly owned subsidiary of United Continental Holdings, Inc. (NYSE: UAL) announced that it will operate 10 roundtrip charter flights to Guam from four Chinese Cities.

They are Shanghai (PVG), Beijing (PEK), Hangzhou (HGH), and Dalian (DCL), during the peak Chinese New Year season, from January to early February 2012. Flights will be operated by the airline's Boeing 737-800 aircraft, which features 14 business and 141 economy class seats.

"This will be our fifth consecutive year operating non-stop charter flights from mainland China to Guam since 2008," said Barry Bergmann, United's managing director for Micronesia and Southeast Asia. "China is one of the world's fastest-growing markets for leisure travel and United States to promote Guam as a beautiful and attractive beach destination to Chinese travelers. With support from our local travel agency partners and Unites's sales team in China, the charter flights truly demonstrate our continued strong commitment to the Guam market."

Germany invites skilled workers from Greece

BERLIN (AP)—Prosperous Germany has a surprising message for sinking Greece: Help Wanted. With a shrinking labor force and buoyant economy, Germany desperately needs skilled workers to keep its industrial engine churning forward. Increasingly, it's seeking them from Greece and other European laggards like Spain and Portugal where unemployment is soaring amid fears of financial implosion.

US companies are feeling impact of European crisis

NEW YORK (AP)—The tremors from Europe's financial upheaval have reached U.S. shores, rattling consumers and companies. The consequences have been limited so far. Yet the United States and Europe are so closely linked that any slowdown across the Atlantic is felt here. U.S. makers of cars, solar panels, drugs, clothes and computer equipment have all reported effects from Europe's turmoil. Worries that Europe's crisis could worsen and spread are spooking investors and consumers just as the holiday shopping season nears. Some fear U.S. consumers could rein in spending. Europe's sputtering growth is already dragging on some U.S. companies' profits and could further slow the U.S. economy.

Kurdish government, ExxonMobil ink oil search deal

SULAIMANIYAH, Iraq (AP)—The Kurdish regional government has signed a deal with ExxonMobil to explore oil fields in northern Iraq, Kurdish officials said Sunday, putting them in sharp conflict with Iraq's national government. The government in Baghdad wants to control all energy contracts signed in Iraq. With the deal, ExxonMobil becomes the first oil major to do business in the Kurdish region in defiance of the central government's wishes.

Obama: Iran sanctions have 'enormous bite'

KAPOLEI, Hawaii (AP)—Defending his efforts to contain Iran's nuclear ambitions, President Barack Obama said Sunday that economic sanctions against Tehran have had "enormous bite," and that he will consult with other nations on additional steps to ensure that Iran does not acquire an atomic weapon.

Obama expressed confidence that Russia and China in particular understand the threat a nuclear armed Iran would pose, and said their leaders agree that Iran cannot weaponize its nuclear power and trigger a nuclear arms race in the region.

The president, at a news conference that closed an Asia-Pacific economic summit, did not specifically say he would consider military action if Tehran were to persist in arming itself with a nuclear weapon. But he added: "We are not taking any options off the table. Iran with nuclear weapons would pose a threat not only to the region but also to the United States."

The sun setting behind him in Hawaii, Obama fielded questions across the domestic and foreign front. He prodded China on its economic policy, pledged to keep fighting Republicans over his largely stalled jobs bill, reflected on the hurt of the Penn State sex abuse scandal and challenged a key congressional debt panel without dropping any veto threats.

For the president, the news conference was his first opportunity to address a report Friday from the International Atomic Energy Agency that provided new evidence that Iran's nuclear program includes clandestine efforts to build a bomb. The report, circulated among the U.N. watchdog agency's member countries, alleges Iran has been working to acquire equipment and weapons design information, testing high explosives and detonators and developing compute models of a warhead's core. Taken together, it's the most unequivocal evidence yet that the Iranian program ranges far beyond enriching uranium for use in energy and medical research, which is what Tehran says it's for.

In meetings Saturday with Russian President Dmitry Medvedev and Chinese President Hu Jintao, Obama sought to rally support for putting new pressure on Iran's regime. But there was little public sign either country was ready to drop its opposition to additional sanctions. The U.S.

has already slapped sanctions on dozens of Iranian government agencies, financial and shipping companies as well as officials over the nuclear program and could target additional institutions like Iran's Central Bank. And the U.N. has imposed four rounds of sanctions that have caused economic hardship in Iran, but have yet to force any change in the nuclear program.

"The sanctions have enormous bite and enormous scope," Obama said.

Obama declined to directly respond to criticism of his Iran policy from Republican presidential candidates Saturday, including former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney's declaration that Obama's re-election would mean a nuclear armed Iran. But he took a swipe at his foes anyway.

"Now is this an easy issue?" he asked. "No, anyone who claims it is, is either politicking or doesn't know what they're talking about."

Utah man receives war medals 66 years late

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—More than six decades after being freed from a Japanese prisoner of war camp, a Utah veteran was compelled to relive the horrors and triumphs of his World War II experience this month when he received a mysterious package containing seven military medals, including the Distinguished Service Cross and Silver Star.

The medals have become a source of pride for retired Army Capt. Tom Harrison, 93, since they arrived in a box with nothing more than a packing slip from a logistics center in Philadelphia on Nov. 4, which happened to be his 65th wedding anniversary. But they have also refreshed painful memories of the Bataan Death March, POW camps and the comrades he lost during the war or in the years since. Harrison can talk at length about his time as a soldier in the Philippines. But he talks about it much like he talks about golf, focusing on small details—be it the flight of a well-hit tee shot or the day he met Gen. Douglas MacArthur—and the people that surrounded him. He doesn't dwell on his own valor.

After the bombing of Pearl Harbor forced the United States into the war, Harrison spent months fighting the Japanese before American and Filipino troops surrendered at the Battle of Bataan. He eventually survived, without lasting physical injury, the Bataan Death March and three-plus years as a Japanese prisoner of war.

"It brings back memories, but also makes you feel like somebody appreciated your service," Harrison said while sitting in his living room with the medals. "It also reminds me of the people I served with in the Philippines. I'm the only survivor from my unit now. I've lost most of my friends."

About 20 years ago, Harrison "shook the cobwebs loose" on his war experiences by writing a book called "Survivor." That has made it easier—but not easy—to talk about the suffering, the disease and the starvation that defined the years of imprisonment.

The medals prompted new interest from his family about the war, Harrison said, although he is reluctant to talk at length about his personal experiences. Instead, Harrison holds up a Presidential Unit Citation as one medal he was particularly pleased to receive because it recognized the soldiers he served with and trained.

His leadership and bravery earned him two of the Army's highest honors, the Distinguished Service Cross and Silver Star. While those medals are only given for extraordinary acts of selfless valor, Harrison said he doesn't remember—or is reluctant to explain—what he did to earn them.

For Penn St., a new week after the worst one ever

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP)—For Penn State University, there was the past week—a week of unimaginable turmoil and sorrow, anger and disbelief and shame. And then there is tomorrow.

As Penn State leaves a harrowing week behind and takes tentative steps toward a new normal, students and alumni alike wonder what exactly that means. What comes next for a proud institution brought low by allegations that powerful men knew they had a predator in their midst and failed to take action? What should members of its community do now?

"Our best," said Julie Weiss, 19, a sophomore from Wayne, N.J., pausing outside her dorm to consider the question.

Last week, the worst in its 156-year history, the place called Happy Valley became noticeably less so. Students and alumni felt betrayed as child sex abuse allegations exploded onto the nation's front pages, bringing notoriety to a place largely untouched by, and unaccustomed to, scandal.

As the school's trustees pledge to get to the bottom of the saga, many Penn Staters are feeling sadness, anger, a sense of loss. Some can't sleep. Others walk around with knots in their stomachs or can't stop thinking about the victims. Wherever two or more people congregate, the subject inevitably comes up. Even Saturday's pregame tailgate parties were muted with the subject that hung low over everything.

"Everyone's been struggling to reconcile how something so bad could happen in a place that we all think is so good," said senior Gina Mattei, 21, of Glen Mills, Pa., hours after Penn State played its first game since 1965 without Joe Paterno on the sidelines as head coach. "It's sad to think that something like that could happen HERE, in a place where everyone is really comfortable and has a lot of community spirit."

Penn State's former assistant football coach, Jerry Sandusky, was charged Nov. 5 with molesting eight boys over a span of 15 years, and two university officials were charged with failing to notify authorities after being told about a 2002 incident in which Sandusky allegedly sodomized a boy in the showers of the football building.

The scandal quickly metastasized, costing two more key figures their jobs—Paterno, the face of Penn State football since 1966, as well as university president Graham Spanier. It also tarnished the reputation of an institution that preached "success with honor"—that, according to its own credo, was supposed to be better than this.

"Everyone kind of feels like this is just the beginning. We still have a (long) way to go for Penn State to redeem itself and get back to the place where we were," said Mattei, who was selling cupcakes, bagels and Rice Krispie treats on College Avenue on Saturday night to raise money for her honors psychology society.

Some students argue that the question itself—"How does Penn State regain what it's lost?"—is flawed. This remains a world-renowned research institution, they point out. It's still the place where students hold THON, a yearly dance marathon that raises millions of dollars for pediatric cancer research. It's far more than football and far bigger than Sandusky, Spanier, even Paterno.

Obama calls waterboarding 'torture'

KAPOLEI, Hawaii (AP)—President Barack Obama says the interrogation technique known as waterboarding constitutes torturing, disputing Republican presidential candidates who say they would reinstate the practice. Obama called waterboarding "torture" and said it was "contrary to America's traditions" during a news conference at the Asian-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit. Republicans Herman Cain and Michele Bachmann said during a Republican debate on Saturday that they would reinstate the technique that former President George W. Bush authorized and Obama banned.

Police move in on Portland park, protesters remain

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—In a tense escalation of the Occupy Portland protest, police in riot gear Sunday surrounded demonstrators in a downtown park area after hundreds of people defied the mayor's order to leave the park by midnight. By early afternoon, officers had mostly surrounded the camp where the protesters were holding a "general assembly" meeting to discuss their next moves following the eviction order. Some officers used nightsticks to push people away from the encampment and used loudspeakers to warn that anyone who resisted risked arrest and "may also be subject to chemical agents and impact weapons." Demonstrators chanted "we are a peaceful protest."

Thailand flooding damages its ancient capital

AYUTTHAYA, Thailand (AP)—Water fowl, monitor lizards and stray dogs have replaced the throngs of tourists at one of Thailand's greatest historical sites. Record flooding has turned Ayutthaya's ancient temples into islands, and a giant statue of the reclining Buddha appears to float miraculously on the lapping water.

Experts fear that at least half of the more than 200 waterlogged monasteries, fortresses and other monuments in the one-time royal capital have been damaged.

"Imagine a thousand tons of brick and stone resting on soft foundations, with no modern-style pilings. We are very worried," said Chaiyanand Busayarat, director of the Ayutthaya Historic Park.

And as floodwaters recede, some experts are proposing a radical change to prevent similar disasters in the future: Turn back the clock about four centuries to emulate the city's urban planners and engineers of that time.

"We can't prevent flooding so we have to learn to live with water again, like those who created Ayutthaya. Let's take out the old city maps," said Anek Sihamat, deputy director-general of the Thai government's Fine Arts Department.

He recommended digging up old canals that have been paved over for roads and curbing the urban sprawl and industrial parks that block the natural runoff of water.

Capital of a powerful state for 417 years, seat of 33 kings, Ayutthaya has been described as one of the greatest cities on water ever, with a canal network that measured more than 85 miles (140 kilometers). Built on the flood plain of central Thailand at the confluence of three rivers, it was inundated annually, but its citizens lived in stilt-raised houses and used boats for transport.

Water also defended Ayutthaya, which once held as many as 1 million residents, until a brutal sacking by the Burmese in 1767 forced relocation of the capital to Bangkok, 50 miles (80 kilometers) to the south—where the same floodwaters that inundated Ayutthaya are now nearing the inner city.

The surge of water from the northern highlands, which began in late July and has killed more than 520 people, is the worst since the 1940s, although Ayutthaya experiences flooding almost every monsoon season.

In coming weeks, experts will assess damage and determine what will be needed to revive and protect the city, which was added to the UNESCO World Heritage list in 1991. Advisers from Venice and the Netherlands, two places that have grappled with the challenges of watery environments, are prepared to come, while several countries, including Germany and Japan, have provided or promised funds. Anek, the Fine Arts official, estimated that some $20 million will be needed.

"Clearly what we hope for from this experience will be a more solid, more thorough flood mitigation plan," said Tim Curtis, head of the culture unit at UNESCO's regional office in Bangkok.

He said that Amsterdam's

19th-century water-based defense line—another World Heritage site—and Venice may be used as models.

Witthaya Pewpong, the Ayutthaya provincial governor, said a dam has been proposed to shield the historic area while flooding would be eased by setting aside a large, construction-free area of the nearby countryside to absorb excess water.

Nevertheless, authorities "know that they will have to learn to live with water because it will always be there," said UNESCO cultural expert Montira Horayangura Unakul. As such, urban planning should be consistent with Ayutthaya's design as a city of water, she said.

To date, Ayutthaya has not scored well on the urban management front. The city of 82,000 people is mushrooming helter-skelter and has bid to host World Expo 2020. Four years ago, amid concern in Thailand that UNESCO might take the city off its list, one Bangkok newspaper wrote that the city was destroyed twice, "first by invading Burmese, and now by greedy and insensitive Thais."

Adding to its watery woes, said Curtis, are problems common to heritage sites: the looting of artifacts, inadequate waste disposal, corrosive vehicle fumes, ugly and inappropriate new construction and mass tourism.

There's also a running battle between heritage and municipal authorities, often allied with business interests.

Kidnapped US boy's relative escapes in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—The Filipino relative of a kidnapped American boy escaped Sunday from al-Qaida-linked Abu Sayyaf militants, who have held them for four months in a southern Philippine jungle, the army said.

Romnick Jakaria dashed to freedom when special Filipino army forces managed to get near an Abu Sayyaf lair near mountainous Sumisip town in Basilan province and alarmed the militants, army Col. Ramon Yogyog said.

The 19-year-old Jakaria went to an army outpost and was undergoing questioning, he said.

Jakaria and his Filipino-American aunt, Gerfa Yeatts Lunsman, and her 14-year-old American son were kidnapped July 12 while they were vacationing with relatives on an island near southern Zamboanga city.

Abu Sayyaf militants last month freed Lunsman, whose son remains in captivity.

Interior Secretary Jesse Robredo has said that the kidnapers had talked with Lunsman's family in the United States and at one time allowed her to talk on the phone as proof that she was alive.

The U.S. and Philippine governments did not pay any ransom for her release, Robredo said, but added he was unaware if any private group paid for her freedom.

Ransom kidnappings have long been a problem in the impoverished region and are blamed mostly on the Abu Sayyaf, a group also notorious for beheadings and bombings, and its allied outlaws.

The Abu Sayyaf was founded on Basilan in the early 1990s as an offshoot of a violent Muslim insurgency that has been raging for decades. U.S.-backed offensives have weakened the group, which is blacklisted by Washington as a terrorist organization, but it remains a key security threat.

The Abu Sayyaf, which is estimated to have about 380 fighters, still holds an Indian, a Malaysian and a Japanese convert to Islam, along with a number of Filipino hostages.

hicles were traveling to the city of Karachi from Thatta, 80 miles (130 kilometers) to the east, when the accident happened Sunday. More than a dozen people were injured. Ahmed is the health minister in Sindh province, where Karachi is the capital. Saeed Javed witnessed the accident and said it was so violent that body parts were scattered near the road.

Indonesians killed some 750 orangutans in a year

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—A new survey says villagers on the Indonesian side of Borneo killed at least 750 endangered orangutans over a yearlong period, some to protect their crops and others for the apes' meat. Erik Meijaard, main author of the report that appeared in the journal PLoS One, says he believes the killings pose a more serious threat to the apes' survival than previously thought. Indonesia is home to 90 percent of the 50,000 to 60,000 orangutans left in the wild. But as forests are being cleared to make way for pulp, paper and palm oil plantations, the apes are coming into conflict with humans.

Release of Myanmar political prisoners may be soon

YANGON, Myanmar (AP)—A government-appointed human rights body on Sunday urged Myanmar's president to release political prisoners or transfer them to prisons close to their families, signaling such action may be imminent.

Speculation is considerable that a new amnesty covering some of an estimated 2,000 political prisoners will be issued this week, perhaps as early as Monday.

A comprehensive release of political detainees would boost Myanmar's already active diplomatic efforts to improve relations with the United States, which shunned the previous military regime because of its poor human rights record and failure to allow free and democratic politics.

Myanmar's three state-owned newspapers published an open letter Sunday from National Human Rights Commission chairman Win Mra calling on President Thein Sein to grant amnesty "as a reflection of magnanimity," or to transfer political prisoners in remote prisons to facilities with easy access for their family members.

The letter's publication is significant because the tightly controlled newspapers closely reflect government positions. An amnesty of 6,359 prisoners in October happened the same day state-run newspapers published a similar appeal.

A prisoner release in the next few days is also anticipated because a meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, or ASEAN, begins Thursday in Bali, Indonesia. Myanmar is seeking to chair ASEAN in 2014, and the release of political prisoners would be seen as a positive development favoring its bid, which is likely to be decided at this week's summit. U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton will also be there to meet regional leaders.

"It appears there are real changes taking place on the ground, and we support these early efforts at reform," Clinton told reporters Friday on the sidelines of an annual Pacific Rim summit. "We want to see the people of Burma able to participate fully in the political life of their own country." The military changed the country's name to Myanmar in 1989, but supporters of the country's pro-democracy movement prefer to use the old name.

Myanmar's nominally civilian government, which took power in March, has declared its intention to liberalize the hard-line policies of the junta that preceded it. It has taken some fledgling steps, such as easing censorship, legalizing labor unions, suspending an unpopular, China-backed dam project and beginning talks with Nobel peace laureate Aung San Suu Kyi and her pro-democracy movement.

In his open letter, Win Mra requested that the president grant amnesty "to those prisoners convicted for breach of existing laws, who do not pose a threat to the stability of the state and public tranquility."

The appeal clearly referred to political prisoners, although the term was not used. The government asserts that it holds no political prisoners, only people convicted under criminal law.

"If for reasons of maintaining peace and stability, certain prisoners cannot as yet be included in the amnesty, the commission would like to respectfully submit that consideration be made for transferring them to prisons with easy access for their family members," the letter said.

In recent years, political detainees who in the past would have been held at Insein Prison in the main city of Yangon have instead been sent to jails in remote parts of the country in an apparent effort to make it difficult for them to communicate with the outside.

Philippines rejects new Chinese territorial claim

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—An official says the Philippines has dismissed a Chinese claim to territory less than 50 miles (80 kilometers) from a Philippine province in the latest dispute in the increasingly tense South China Sea. Philippine Energy Undersecretary Jose Layug Jr. says China protested in July over a Philippine invitation to foreign investors to hunt for oil in the area, claiming it belonged to Beijing. It is the closest point in waters off the main Philippine islands that China has claimed. Layug said Monday the Philippines quickly rejected the Chinese protest. It will likely bolster Philippine resolve to seek a U.N. ruling on the long-simmering territorial disputes.

moves,” said Carlo Guarnieri, a political scientist at the University of Bologna.

A leading economist, Monti is among the most respected men in the country and the most admired Italians in Europe.

That will be no guarantee for success in the Herculean task before him: building a majority large enough to push painful structural reforms through a fractured Parliament to prevent Italy from being dragged into the burgeoning debt crisis.

But he has some clear assets: he is part of the Italian financial establishment, has strong ties to European institutions and governments and enjoys the clear support of President Giorgio Napolitano, who gave Monti a mandate Sunday to form a new government.

Providing a sober contrast to the audacious Silvio Berlusconi, who resigned Saturday, Monti also is the favorite of the financial markets, which eased pressure on Italian borrowing costs after his candidacy gained currency.

Monti, 68, cuts an austere and serious figure, which people who know him say defies a subtle wit. He is multilingual and moves easily among European capitals. Now the president of Milan’s prestigious Bocconi University, he spent 10 years at the European Commission, about half in the powerful post of competition commissioner, and is one of the founders of the Brussels-based Bruegel think tank, which blends research with policy recommendations.

10 militants killed in Yemen; UN pushes peace plan

SANAA, Yemen (AP)—Yemeni government forces and allied tribesmen killed 10 militants in attacks around the country Sunday, security officials said, as a visiting United Nations envoy met with embattled President Ali Abdullah Saleh to push for a solution to the country’s political crisis. Security has collapsed across the Arab world’s poorest nation during the nine-month popular uprising seeking to oust Saleh, who has been in power for 30 years. Pro-Saleh forces regularly engage in deadly clashes with armed tribesmen and military defectors who support the protesters in Yemen’s largest cities, and al-Qaida-linked militants have taken control of entire towns in the country’s restive south.

Israeli official: military could topple Hamas

REIM MILITARY BASE, Israel (AP)—Weeks after a new round of fighting with Gaza militants subsided, a senior Israeli military official said Sunday that Israel is ready and able to topple the territory’s Hamas government, though it has no immediate plans to do so. The official also said Gaza militants have steadily built up an already formidable arsenal, in part with weapons smuggled out of Libya, and now have rockets capable of striking Tel Aviv, Israel’s cultural and business hub. “If we have to conquer the whole Gaza Strip, we’ll do it,” said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity under Israeli military guidelines. Israel withdrew from Gaza in 2005 after a 38-year military occupation.

3,000 Brazilian police seize Rio’s biggest slum

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—More than 3,000 police and soldiers backed by armored personnel carriers raced into Brazil’s biggest slum before dawn Sunday, quickly gaining control of a shantytown ruled for decades by a heavily armed drug gang. The takeover of the Rocinha neighborhood was the most ambitious operation yet in an effort to increase security before Rio hosts the final matches of the 2014 World Cup and the 2016 Olympics. Officials are counting on those events to signal Brazil’s arrival as a global economic, political and cultural power. The head of state security and chief architect of Rio’s shantytown pacification program, Jose Mariano Beltrame, called the operation a major success and a big step toward breaking drug traffickers’ hold on key parts of Rio.

By BARRY SPYKER
MCCLATCHY NEWSPAPERS

Mercedes sharpened the looks and performance of the 2012 SLK 350, yet that's not where the real "magic" is. For that, one must look to the stars.

It's the coolest feature, an optional sunroof with a blue hue that blocks the sun until you press a button above: Then, it's clear as glass and lets the sun shine in. Called the Magic Sky Control Roof, this unique sunroof is made up of metallic particles that stand when given an electrical charge. Something like that.

Anyway, the result is a functional dimmer when you want the sun out, and an "oh, wow" feature to show your friends.

The magic doesn't come cheap—it's a $2,500 option. To make matters worse, you'll probably need to get it: the ordinary-glass version ($500) lacks a sunshade.

Cool option, but there's plenty more to like about the new SLK. And I'm talking to the male roadster lovers, too. This year, SLK goes beyond the chick-car status of the previous generation.

By that I mean Mercedes toughened SLK's look with a bolder, more aggressive front: larger grille and bigger three-point star.

And this third-generation SLK 350 also has the guts and glorious handling it never had before. It used to be quite satisfied being stylish, sexy and comfortable. And it's still all those things.

But now it gets a new 3.5-liter, direct-injected V-6 engine that moves the roadster with spunk and finesse. With 302 hp and 273 pound-feet of torque, it'll pull you to 60 mph in a grin-evoking 5.4 seconds. That's on a par with the beastly SL550.

Mileage for the rear-wheel-drive SLK350 is around 24 mph combined—20 in the city, 29 on the highway if your behave.

By the way, also new this year: The 350's little brother, the 250, gets a 1.8-liter turbo-charged engine that gets 201 hp and gets you to 60 mph in 6.5 seconds. Also quite fun and probably enough for many buyers. And a six-speed manual is standard.

SLK handling is boosted with Mercedes' Direct Steering system which offers good response on the curves. Taking corners is smoother and flatter than ever, now in the same league as its popular foes, the BMW Z4 and Porsche Boxter.

It rides on an updated platform stemming from the C-Class. Suspension is a tick less roady than the competition but is still sportier than last year's model. All things considered, this is more of a driver's car than ever.

Retract the roof and the cabin still feels comfortable, thanks to optional fixed-glass deflectors behind each seat and standard mesh wind deflector. An Air Scarf feature blows warm air on your neck if you can't resist putting the top down when it's chilly.

There are barely any body rattles often associated with roadsters and convertibles.

Equally important, when the top is down there is still decent cargo space in the trunk. It gets reduced from 10 to 6 cubic feet, but it's at least enough for an average-size suitcase or a couple of duffles.

Seats are firm but comfortable and roomy enough, as are leg and head room. Not abundant for a six-plus footer, but enough. Recline the seat-back too far and the seat slides forward, meaning you'll have to compromise leg room.

Materials are nothing short of exquisite, with standard leather and aluminum trim. Pay more and you can get even finer leather and wood trim. Both gorgeous.

Gauges are easy to see even in bright sunlight since they're set back in little tunnels. The 7-inch LCD screen is sharp and clear. Controls and dials are within nice view and reach.

The SLK is loaded with safety features like the usual ABS, traction and stability control, but also multiple air bags that cover the head, knees and body. It also has what Mercedes calls Attention Assist, which monitors the driver's drowsiness.

Among the standards on the 350 are 18-inch wheels, automatic wipers, eight-way power seats with lumbar adjustment, eight-speaker sound and Bluetooth.

The Premium 1 package ($2,590) adds remote roof activation—you can put down the roof before you even reach the car—and a Harmon Kardon sound system with satellite and iPod connection.

But there's more: A multimedia package ($2,150) gets a nav system with bigger screen, a six-CD changer and voice control capability. Lighting package ($1,070) has bi-xenon lamps with active curve lighting. A Distronic Plus package offers adaptive cruise control and a Dynamic Handling package brings adjustable suspension and better brakes.

Additional options, like the dimming sunroof and parking sensor, can be had as solo options.

The great actor and director, John Cassavetes, as he looked to the sky in the flick, Tempest, said "Show me the Magic." Well, just look to the sunroof in the 2012 SLK and you'll see it.

But you'll discover even more magic when you hit the open road.

MSRP: $54,800 As tested: $64,965 (with Premium 1, Lighting and Multimedia packages)

Oscar's tumultuous week ends with Governors Awards

Actor John Travolta, and his wife, actress Kelly Preston, pose together at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' 2011 Governors Awards, Saturday, Nov. 12, 2011, in Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—After a tumultuous week that saw the departure and replacement of the Oscar show's host and producer, the film academy enjoyed a night of good vibes Saturday at its third annual Governors Awards. You might even say the force was with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Armed "Star Wars" storm troopers ensured guests were in their seats and paying attention as Darth Vader opened the evening honoring James Earl Jones, Oprah Winfrey and makeup artist Dick Smith. Under Vader's helmet was academy president Tom Sherak, who welcomed the audience of industry insiders with, "How was your week?"

Over the past week, Oscar producer Brett Ratner and host Eddie Murphy resigned and were replaced with producer Brian Grazer and host Billy Crystal. Ratner departed the Oscar show amid criticism of his use of a pejorative term for gay men at a screening of the director's action comedy "Tower Heist," which stars Murphy.

Saturday's untelevised Governors Awards, though, couldn't have been smoother, as Jones, Smith and Winfrey accepted Oscar statuettes in front of a starry crowd that included John Travolta, Alec Baldwin, Woody Harrelson, Sharon Stone, Seth Rogen, Sidney Poitier and Tyler Perry, among others.

Jones, who famously voiced Vader, accepted his award by video from London's Wyndham Theater, where he is starring in "Driving Miss Daisy" with Vanessa Redgrave. Baldwin and Glenn Close feted the actor before Sir Ben Kingsley presented him with his Oscar onstage in London.

Close called Jones "a world treasure" and Kingsley said the 80-year-old actor is "always so damn good."

A beaming Jones said receiving an Oscar in such a fashion is "an actor's wet dream."

"I'm deeply honored, mighty grateful and just plain gob-smacked," he said.

Smith, the groundbreaking makeup artist who counts "The Exorcist" and "The Godfather" among his credits, was lauded for his long career and his generosity in sharing the secrets of his craft. Writer-directors J.J. Abrams, Peter Jackson and Guillermo del Toro saluted the 89-year old.

Abrams, creator of TV's "Lost" and "Fringe," said Smith "was the Beatles to me" and told of how he wrote a fan letter to the makeup artist and received an "old but clean" tongue from "The Exorcist" in return.

Smith said being honored by the academy was "an incredible joy, one of the greatest I've ever had in my whole life."

"I have loved being a makeup artist so much," he said, "but ... to have so much kindness given to me all at once is just too much. I am so grateful."

Winfrey was introduced by Quincy Jones, Travolta, Maria Shriver, producer Larry Gordon and a student she'd never met but whose education she funded.

Travolta said "the academy got it right" when it chose the media mogul to receive its Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award, calling her "the most wonderful person in the world, the most magical person in the world and the most powerful person in the world."

Winfrey cried and nuzzled into boyfriend Stedman Graham as Shriver and the others spoke of her generosity, which includes providing scholarships for 65,000 students.

She said receiving an Oscar for philanthropy is "unimaginable" given her humble beginnings in Mississippi.

"It's impossible for you to even know what this journey has meant," Winfrey said.

Appearing in "The Color Purple" was "one of the greatest experiences of my life," she said. When Quincy Jones tapped her for the role of Sofia—for which she earned an Oscar nomination for supporting actress—he changed the course of her career.

"I'd like to do more films, but to receive the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award means more to me than any film, any acclaim, even an Oscar, because what it says is you all get it," Winfrey said. "What this really means is that you all understand that what I've been trying to do, what I've been trying to say all these years, (which) is that all of us can make a difference through the life that we live."

Winfrey said she plans to keep her new Oscar front and center on her desk.

"For me this Oscar will represent love from all of you,"

she said. "I thank you for your vote of love and I will use it to increase the open space in my heart to continue to do the great and good work that we all have come to do."

The film academy launched its Governors Awards three years ago to pay tribute to winners of honorary Oscars—prizes previously presented during the Academy Awards telecast. Governors from its 15 branches chose Saturday's winners.

Highlights from the event will be available online at Oscars.org and included in the Academy Awards telecast in February.

Oscars honors Vanessa Redgrave in London

LONDON (AP)—Vanessa Redgrave was hailed at a Hollywood film academy tribute Sunday, praised as an actress and an activist by A-list friends including Ralph Fiennes, Meryl Streep and James Earl Jones.

More than 30 years after she shocked the Oscars ceremony with a fiercely political acceptance speech, Redgrave was the subject of an Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences retrospective—its first to an actor in Europe.

"I love this woman. My wife understands," said Jones, who is currently starring alongside Redgrave in "Driving Miss Daisy" on the London stage.

"I stand in profound admiration of her courage, both on and off the stage," said Jones, who received an honorary Academy Award on Saturday—presented to him in front of a surprised matinee audience at Wyndham's Theatre.

Redgrave's bold artistic and political choices were a theme of the evening, hosted by playwright David Hare.

A member of a famous British acting dynasty that includes her father, sister, brother and two daughters, Redgrave has appeared in more than 100 films since her 1958 debut in "Behind the Mask." She is also known for her humanitarian work as a UNICEF ambassador, and for decades of left-wing political activism.

The 74-year-old actress has been nominated for six Oscars and won for her supporting role as an anti-Nazi activist in 1977's "Julia."

Her victory led to one of the most startling moments in Oscar history. The Jewish Defense League had objected to her nomination and picketed the ceremony because Redgrave had narrated and helped fund a documentary, "The Palestinian," which supported a Palestinian state.

In her acceptance speech, Redgrave praised the academy for not being intimidated by "a small bunch of Zionist hoodlums whose behavior is an insult to the stature of Jews all over the world and their great and heroic record of struggle against fascism and oppression." Her comments were met by gasps, boos and growing applause.

Streep—who made her film debut in "Julia"—said that speech was the moment when she first recognized that "fame was not just this stupid vanity ... you could use it to make a difference in the world."

Fiennes, British actress Eileen Atkins, Liam Neeson and Jane Fonda added their own tributes to a performer Fonda called "my friend ... my idol ... my mentor."

Hare screened clips from across Redgrave's eclectic career—from landmark 1960s films like "Blow-Up" to the musical "Camelot" and dramas such as "Julia" and "Second Serve," in which Redgrave played transsexual tennis pro Renee Richards.

Hare said she was one of a generation of actresses who "went on to be so much more interesting than their early stereotyping allowed." But he noted that she was also "fated to live parallel public lives: first as a celebrity and secondly as an actor."

Atkins said the two words most often used about Redgrave were "courage" and "radiance."

"And I think that comes from her true belief that basically mankind is very good," Atkins said. "She believes in humanity, and not many people do."

'New Girl's' guys are her support system

By YVONNE VILLARREAL
LOS ANGELES TIMES

LOS ANGELES—The way folks go on about how darn adorable Zooey Deschanel is, you'd think she'd be the one at the center of a silly scene being shot on the set of her hit series "New Girl," tripping and stumbling around in roller skates. But it's her three male costars who are attempting to be goofily graceful in an upcoming episode of the Fox comedy.

"This won't be pretty," said Max Greenfield, who plays overly confident Schmidt, while jaunting across the hardwood floor during rehearsals.

Deschanel may be the face of the new half-hour sitcom, not to mention the voice (that's her crooning the show's bubbly theme song). She's even the commercial sometimes (her 2009 ad for Cotton seems to be working overtime on the network).

But just as Cher needed Sonny for backup, Deschanel's Jess needs her dudes.

Greenfield, Jake Johnson and Lamorne Morris play the roommates who take in Deschanel's character when she's at her lowest ebb, after a humiliating split from her boyfriend, and accept her for who she is—one of the guys. A very weird, girly guy who likes to watch "Dirty Dancing" and do the chicken dance in slow motion.

"This is like the ultra-modern 'Sex and the City,'" joked Johnson ("No Strings Attached"), who plays Nick, the hopeless romantic of the show.

Actually, "New Girl" backs away from the "Sex and the City" female buddy route, currently employed by "2 Broke Girls." And it's not nearly as male-centric as ABC's "Man Up."

Rather, it aims to highlight the female-male buddy relationship. It's the dynamic TBS' "My Boys," which ended its run last year, focused on and the rapport ABC's "Happy Endings" plays with at times.

"I wanted a girl sort of walking into a different world—a guy world," said Liz Meriwether, the series creator. "Guys help you in a different way than girls can. You get that tough love."

Meriwether said the idea was semi-autobiographical: "I started looking around my life and realized I had a lot of friends who were guys and I was thinking about why that was." The original premise was an updated "Three's Company"—with two guys and a girl, she said.

But in the end, they threw a third male perspective into the mix to tip the gender balance and make things "more interesting."

The result is a trio of guys who will push Jess to face her ex-boyfriend and demand he return her TV (because they need a TV) or will ditch a club with one-night-stand potential to rescue her when a date stands her up. They are the wind beneath her wings, if you will. And they're the kind of fellas male viewers would have a beer with and female viewers want to watch a romantic comedy with.

They are the secret ingredient of the series, keeping Deschanel's loopy character balanced (as much as she can be).

"Jess is a weird chick," said Morris, who plays low-key Winston, the character written to fill the void left by original "New Girl" guy Damon Wayans Jr., who now appears on ABC's "Happy Endings." "But that's why we love her. That's why we care about her. We're all learning from each other ... in ways we wouldn't be able to if we were just hanging with our own sexes. We'd be, like, talking about Axe body spray all day or something."

Behind the scenes, the connection between Deschanel and the trio is evident.

When Johnson is having difficulty keeping his balance on his skates, the 31-year-old actress/singer-songwriter instructs him to bend his knees. "You are such a dork," she quips when even that fails him.

Even so, there's something to be said about the friendship among the guys sans the spotlight that inevitably follows Deschanel. Before filming the skating scene, the men sat huddled in Johnson's tiny trailer and their boyish manliness exposed itself: They threw a baseball to one another while talking; they talked about the "awesome"-ness that is Bob Dylan; they yanked one another's chain, like when Greenfield was taunted for his in-depth knowledge of "Glee."

"The three of us very much understand the uniqueness of the situation we're in," Johnson said. "It's not every day you get on a TV show and it strikes a chord. You do pilot after pilot. Failed show after failed show. But when you get on a show that gets some traction—I know it's still in the early stages for us—but you go, 'OK, wow, we're in a real situation here.'"

The earnest moment lasts for only so long.

"Who knew you were such a sap?" Greenfield says.

'Immortals' reigns with $32M opening weekend

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The gods of ancient Greece have extended their rule to the weekend box office with a No. 1 debut for the action tale "Immortals."

The story of Greek hero Theseus took in $32 million domestically, while Adam Sandler's comedy "Jack and Jill" opened at No. 2 with $26 million, according to studio estimates Sunday.

The new movies bumped the animated hit "Puss in Boots" to the No. 3 spot after two weekends at the top. "Puss in Boots" earned $25.5 million, raising its domestic total to $108.8 million.

Director Clint Eastwood's

"J. Edgar," a film biography starring Leonardo DiCaprio as longtime FBI boss J. Edgar Hoover, played in narrower release and opened at No. 5 with $11.5 million.

Released by Relativity Media, "Immortals" stars Henry Cavill and Freida Pinto in a tale of human heroes battling an evil king (Mickey Rourke) who aims to bring down the Olympian gods.

With males making up 60 percent of its audience, "Immortals" has a chance to corner much of the action market through Thanksgiving weekend and beyond, a period likely to be dominated by

1. "Immortals," $32 million ($36 million international).
2. "Jack and Jill," $26 million ($2.7 million international).
3. "Puss in Boots," $25.5 million ($4.5 million international).
4. "Tower Heist," $13.2 million ($7.6 million international).
5. "J. Edgar," $11.5 million.
6. "A Very Harold & Kumar 3D Christmas," $5.9 million.
7. "In Time," $4.2 million ($8.5 million international).
8. "Paranormal Activity 3," $3.6 million ($7.1 million international).
9. "Footloose," $2.7 million.
10. "Real Steel," $2 million ($12 million international).

family movies such as "Happy Feet 2," "The Muppets," "Hugo" and "Arthur Christmas."

"The Twilight Saga: Breaking Dawn—Part 1" does open Friday, but that blockbuster action fantasy franchise mainly draws female crowds, typically a smaller segment of the action audience.

Estimated ticket sales for Friday through Sunday at U.S. and Canadian theaters, according to Hollywood.com. Where available, latest international numbers are also included. Final domestic figures will be released Monday.

Synopsis
A brave young stonemason assembles a fierce band of warriors to prevent an evil king from acquiring the artifact that will permit him to rule the world in this epic mythological fantasy from visionary filmmaker Tarsem Singh. King Hyperion (Mickey Rourke) is a brutal tyrant on a bloody mission to seek out the mythical Bow of Epirus. Should he succeed, even the Gods of Olympus will be forced to bow before him. In his efforts to locate the invincible and elusive weapon, Hyperion leads his Heraklion army on a brutal rampage across Greece, razing every town in their path, and killing with impunity. When the Hyperions lay waste to his village and cut down his mother in cold blood, vengeful stonemason Theseus (Henry Cavill) emerges from the rubble determined to make the king pay for his crimes.

Copper sword stolen from statue at Lincoln's Tomb

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Copper thieves have struck at Abraham Lincoln's burial site in Springfield, Ill.

An employee recently noticed that a copper statue atop the tomb was missing a 3-foot-long sword. The statue is of a Civil War artillery officer.

The sword was allegedly taken sometime between September and early November. It was broken at the handle.

Dave Blanchette is spokesman for the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency. He tells the (Springfield) State Journal-Register (<http://bit.ly/sxWgJm>) that the theft is believed to be the first to state property stolen at the Lincoln Tomb Historic Site since the same sword was stolen more than a century ago.

State officials plan to repair the statue.

A guard used to be stationed at the tomb overnight, but Blanchette says the position was cut amid budget problems.

'Hawaii Five-0' cast to aid veterans project

HONOLULU (AP)—The stars of CBS' "Hawaii Five-0" will be lending a hand off-screen to military school kids at Pearl Harbor.

Actors Alex O'Loughlin, Scott Caan, Daniel Dae Kim and Masi Oka will be among the volunteers Monday helping to plant a garden at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam.

Husband and wife athletes Laird Hamilton and Gabrielle Reece will also be volunteering.

The American Heart Association Teaching Garden will serve as a hands-on way to educate children about the importance of healthy habits.

The project is part of an initiative to support U.S. veterans through community service.

First Lady Michelle Obama, who launched her Joining Forces initiative in April with the vice-president's wife, Jill Biden, will be speaking at the base Monday during a hiring fair for veterans.

On 'SNL,' Penn State scandal offends even Satan

NEW YORK (AP)—On "Saturday Night Live," even the devil was offended by the Penn State child sex abuse scandal.

"SNL" cast member Jason Sudeikis reprised his role as Satan, appearing with red horns and pitchfork. The devil was informed by "Weekend Update" host Seth Meyers of sex charges against a former defensive coordinator and allegations that university officials failed to report the abuse.

Even he was disturbed by the news. Addressing Penn State students who protested football coach Joe Paterno's firing, the devil spoke directly into the camera, asking, "Do you know how bad that made you look?"

Disgusted by the scandal, the devil says, "Evil isn't what it used to be."

He pledged to quit and said he would return to his old job: customer service for a cable TV company.

CELEBRITY EXTRA

By CINDY ELAVSKY
KING FEATURES SYND., INC.

Q: I am heartbroken that Fox has canceled "America's Most Wanted." I've watched the show since the beginning, and I am so proud of all the good John Walsh and his crew have done to "get those dirtbags off the streets"! Is there an address for Fox that we can write to, hopefully to change their minds?—Gertrude T., via e-mail

A: I have good news for you, Gertrude. Lifetime Television recently announced that it has picked up John Walsh's top crime-fighting show, which will return for its 25th season later this year. While there is not an exact airdate scheduled as of this writing, keep an eye on this column for updates as I get them. Also, check online at www.celebrityextraonline.com as December gets closer for my exclusive interview with John Walsh about the resurrection of "AMW" on Lifetime. I'm sure we'll also talk about all those "creeps" and "slimeballs" that John will be trying to capture this upcoming season.

Q: I loved the TV show "Lost" and have been wondering about the man who played Sawyer. He is such a good actor. Do you have any info on what he's doing now?—Janet R., Newark, Ohio

A: The handsome Josh Holloway, 42, has been keeping pretty busy since "Lost" ended last year. You can see him again soon on the big screen in "Mission: Impossible—Ghost Protocol." In the movie, which hits theaters on Dec. 21, Josh plays Trevor Hanaway, a member of Ethan Hunt's (played by Tom Cruise) Mission Impossible force, along with Ving Rhames and Academy Award-nominee Jeremy Renner.

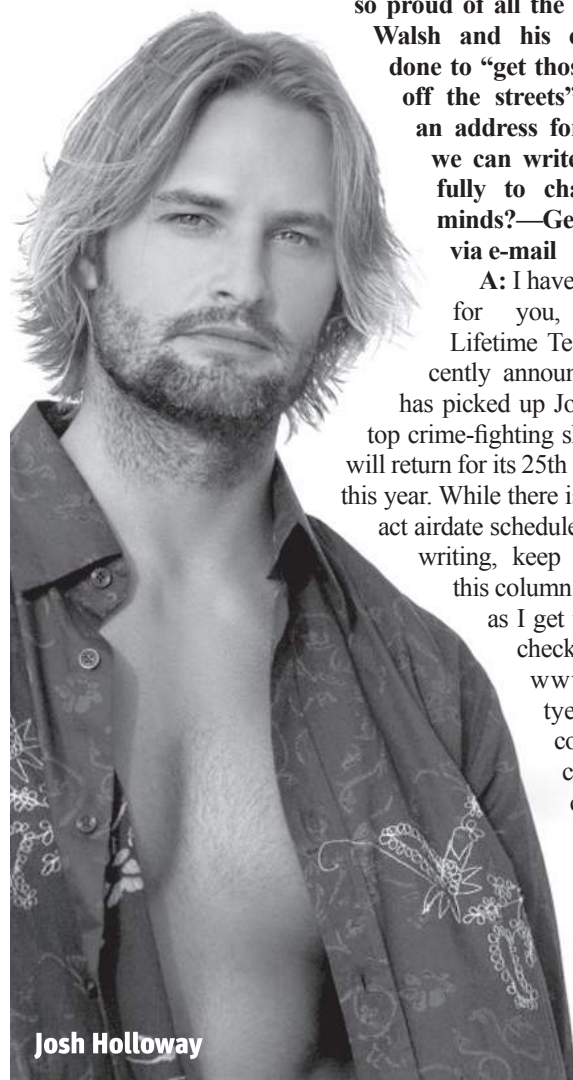

Q: I really liked your idea a few months back of having Beth Littleford (of "Crazy Stupid Love") playing James Spader's wife in "The Office" this season, but now I hear Maura Tierney has been tapped for the part. Is that true? If so, what do you think about that?—Holly T., via e-mail

A: While Maura is no stranger to comedy—she co-starred on "News Radio" from 1995-99—she usually plays the straight (wo)man, which is exactly what James Spader needs, now that we are getting a better idea of what his character, Robert California, is like. So now I make this modest proposal: How about we cast Beth as Robert's Scranton mistress? Her offbeat and hilarious sense of humor, along with her improv skills and deadpan humor, would make her the perfect "secret lover" for the new boss, as well as an excellent foil for the rest of the cast. Are you listening, Paul Lieberstein and crew?

Q: I really like the reality/survival series, "The Colony," on the Discovery Channel. When will the third season start?—Jane R., Philadelphia

A: According to a Discovery Channel representative, currently there are no plans to bring "The Colony" back in 2011. I'll keep checking and keep you posted as I learn any more details for 2012.

Write to Cindy at King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475; or e-mail her at letters@cindyelavsky.com.

Ex-porn star reading to LA students causes stir

COMPTON, Calif. (AP)—Some parents have filed complaints with the Parent-Teacher Association after a former adult film star said she read to children in a classroom at a Los Angeles County elementary school. Sasha Grey, a 23-year-old ex-porn actress who has appeared in mainstream shows like HBO's "Entourage," was a guest earlier this month at Compton's Emerson Elementary School for Read Across America Day. Grey tweeted Nov. 2 that she spent the day reading to students in the first and third grades. KTLA-TV quoted parents questioning whether it was appropriate to have Grey at the school. Parent Dudley Wheaton wondered why the school couldn't find a fireman or a police officer to read to students. Grey has not appeared in porn films in over two years. She has been a regular on "Entourage" and appeared in the 2009 film "The Girlfriend Experience."

Company seeks Alaska Army wives for TV show

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—A new reality television show is looking for cast members in Alaska. The Fairbanks Daily News-Miner reports 44 Blue Productions is seeking people for "Army Wives of Alaska." The company has produced shows such as "The True Story of Black Hawk Down," "U.S. Navy Pirate Hunters" and "Cell Dogs." Army Alaska is supporting the show and will host the production company when staff members interview spouses this month. Company co-owner Stephanie Dachkovitch says she was an "Army kid" herself and her mother was an Army wife. She says her company wants to show military spouses in extraordinary conditions. She says the company will seek spouses of military personnel in different units and ranks.

Cancer patient is stunned by woman's tasteless joke

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I have been battling breast cancer and have been blessed to have a lot of support from family, friends and some awesome medical providers. My husband's best friend and his wife socialize with us quite often, and the friendship is important to him. I recently celebrated a birthday and these friends had us over for a belated birthday dinner. They bought me beautiful flowers and a gift. The card attached made a joke about my "aging breasts," which she found quite funny.

Abby, I had a mastectomy, which she knew about! To make matters worse, my hair has just started to grow back from the chemo, so I decided to have some highlights put in, and she told me she didn't like my new hair.

I am hurt and dumbfounded by her insensitive behavior. Unfortunately, this isn't the first time she has said things like this. How do I tell her I'm offended by her rudeness without compromising my husband's friendship with them?

HARRIED FRIEND

DEAR HARRIED FRIEND: You nailed it. The woman is insensitive—but you said she has also made tasteless comments in the past. For the sake of the friendship between your husbands, tune her out and spend less time with her one-on-one. It's OK to tell her that her joke about your "aging breasts" hurt your feelings in light of your mastectomy, and that as your hair is growing back you thought you'd like to try something "different." However, if you use the word "offended" she'll probably become defensive, so avoid that word.

A final thought: Most people are terrified of cancer. People sometimes try to make jokes about things that make them uncomfortable in an effort to diffuse those feelings. This may be the reason the woman tried to joke about it, so don't let it cause you to carry a grudge.

DEAR ABBY: I have recently reconciled with my girlfriend of six years, "Molly." It has been five months since our last fallout and longest breakup. While we were apart, a woman I knew through my business made it clear that she was interested in me. One thing led to another and "Tish" and I slept together. Now she's pregnant.

I'm happy to be back with Molly now, but have been contacted recently by Tish with proof of the pregnancy. I'm afraid Molly will leave me if she knows about it. She's the woman of my dreams and the one I want to spend the rest of my life with. Help, please.

IT'S COMPLICATED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR IT'S COMPLICATED: I'll try. Talk to Molly about this and consult an attorney. Molly should not hold against you something that happened while you were separated. Whether the child is yours can be determined by a paternity test. If it is yours, you will be responsible for providing child support until he or she is an adult and emotional support well beyond. If Molly is, indeed, the woman of your dreams, she'll stand beside you. If not, you are better off without her.

And in the future, please use birth control, so you can plan the number of offspring you bring into this world.

DEAR ABBY: I work as a mattress salesperson. Often when I tell my senior customers about the 10-year warranty on a bed, they'll reply, "Oh, I doubt I'll be around that long."

At that point I'm usually at a loss for words. Any suggestions as to an appropriate response?

SPEECHLESS IN SUFFERN, N.Y.

DEAR SPEECHLESS: Smile and say, "Then be sure to include the mattress in your will."

Saints beat Falcons in OT on Kasay kick

ATLANTA (AP)—John Kasay kicked a 26-yard field goal in overtime to give the New Orleans Saints a 26-23 victory over Atlanta after Falcons coach Mike Smith decided to go for it on fourth down deep in his own territory Sunday.

The Falcons (5-4) rallied from a 10-point deficit in the fourth quarter, equalizing on Matt Bryant's 27-yard field goal on the final play of regulation.

In overtime, Atlanta appeared to pick up a first down on a pass to Mike Cox, but he was ruled just short after referee Terry McAuley looked at the replay. Then, stunningly, Smith decided to go for it on fourth down from his own 29.

Michael Turner was stuffed, and Kasay kicked the winning field goal for the Saints (7-3).

New Orleans took control of the NFC South race, ending Atlanta's three-game winning streak. But this one will be long remembered for Smith's call that backfired horribly.

Patriots 37, Jets 16

In East Rutherford, New Jersey, Tom Brady threw three touchdown passes, two to Rob Gronkowski, as New England took control of the AFC East with a convincing victory over New York.

After the Jets (5-4) cut it to 23-16 early in the fourth quarter, Brady coolly led the Patriots (6-3) down the field on an 84-yard drive that was capped by an 8-yard touchdown catch by Deion Branch.

New England linebacker Rob Ninkovich sealed the victory on the Jets' next possession with a 12-yard interception return for a touchdown.

The Patriots took over sole possession of top spot in the division by inflicting the Jets' first home loss this season, and snapping their three-game winning streak.

Cardinals 21, Eagles 17

In Philadelphia, John Skelton threw a 5-yard touchdown pass to Early Doucet with 1:53 left to lift Arizona.

Michael Vick had another so-so performance and the Eagles (3-6) blew a fourth-quarter lead for the fifth time this season.

Starting for the injured Kevin Kolb, Skelton threw three touchdown passes to lead the Cardinals (3-6). Larry Fitzgerald had two TD catches and made a sensational, over-the-shoulder diving catch to set up the go-ahead score.

The defending NFC East champion Eagles were expected to be Super Bowl contenders after a slew of big-name acquisitions in the offseason. Instead, they've lost seven of their past eight home games.

Broncos 17, Chiefs 10

In Kansas City, Tim Tebow hit Eric Decker on a 56-yard touchdown pass, one of his two completions in the game, to guide Denver to victory.

Denver (4-5) played almost the entire game without leading rushers Willis McGahee and Knowshon Moreno. McGahee hurt his hamstring and Moreno went down with a knee injury in the first quarter.

Lance Ball ran for 96 yards and Tebow added 44 yards and a touchdown on the ground, helping the Broncos win for the third time in four games with the former Heisman Trophy winner under center.

Steelers 24, Bengals 17

In Cincinnati, Rashard Mendenhall ran for a pair of touchdowns, while Pittsburgh intercepted rookie Andy Dalton twice in the fourth quarter.

Pittsburgh (7-3) got a needed win by putting together long, balanced drives while thousands of Steelers fans waved Terrible Towels in the first sellout crowd of the season at Paul Brown Stadium.

Dalton handled most of what Steelers defensive coordinator Dick LeBeau threw at him. He had two more touchdown passes, giving him 14 overall—the most by a rookie quarterback in his first nine games since the AFL-NFL merger in 1970.

49ers 27, Giants 20

In t San Francisco, Justin Smith batted down Eli Manning's pass in the closing seconds as San Francisco won its seventh straight game.

Manning completed a pair of long fourth-down passes and got the Giants (6-3) down to the 10, but on fourth-and-2 with 1:51 left, Smith made a leaping right-handed smack of the ball.

In a game between division leaders, the 49ers (8-1) didn't rely on Frank Gore, whose franchise-record streak of five straight games with 100 yards rushing ended with a knee injury.

Bears 37, Lions 13

In Chicago, Charles Tillman and Major Wright returned interceptions for touchdowns early in the third quarter, and Chicago picked off Matthew Stafford four times.

The four interceptions by Stafford matched his season total entering the game and helped knock the Lions (6-3) into a second-place tie with Chicago in the NFC North. He was also involved in a skirmish that led to an ejection of Chicago's D.J. Moore early in the fourth quarter.

New Orleans Saints quarterback Chase Daniel (10) reacts after John Kasay (2) kicked the winning field goal in overtime of an NFL football game against the Atlanta Falcons, Sunday, Nov. 13, 2011, in Atlanta.

By then, the Bears (6-3) had locked up their fourth straight win thanks to a dominant defensive effort and another punt return for a touchdown by Devin Hester, who ran one back 82 yards. That extended his NFL record to 12.

Seahawks 22, Ravens 17

In Seattle, Steven Hauschka matched a club record with five field goals and Marshawn Lynch scored on a 1-yard plunge.

A week after staking claim to the lead of the AFC North with a thrilling last-second win at Pittsburgh, the Ravens flopped on the West Coast in an all too similar fashion to letdowns twice already this season.

After routing Pittsburgh in its opener, the Ravens (6-3) were dominated in a loss at Tennessee. Just a few weeks ago, after an impressive win over AFC South-leading Houston, the Ravens lost to Jacksonville.

Jaguars 17, Colts 3

In Indianapolis, Blaine Gabbert threw for a touchdown and Maurice Jones-Drew ran for another score to keep the Colts winless.

Jones-Drew carried 25 times for 114 yards and became the second player in franchise history to top 6,000 yards rushing. It was the first road win of the season for Jacksonville (3-6).

Indianapolis remained the NFL's last winless team, dropping to 0-10 for the first time since 1997.

Gabbert hooked up with Jarrett Dillard on an 11-yard TD pass late in the third quarter to break a 3-3 tie, and Jones-Drew capped an 8-yard drive with a 3-yard touchdown run late in the fourth to seal it.

Titans 30, Panthers 3

In Charlotte, Chris Johnson ran for a season-high 130 yards and a touchdown, and Tennessee used a stifling defense to frustrate rookie Cam Newton.

The Titans (5-4) sacked Newton five times and took away Carolina's long passing game. Carolina (2-7) came in ranked fifth in the league on offense and first in plays of 20-plus yards, but the Titans limited Newton to 209 yards passing and held Steve Smith, the NFC's leading receiver, to 33 yards.

Johnson had 174 yards from scrimmage and eclipsed 100 yards rushing for the first time since Oct. 2.

Texans 37, Buccaneers 9

In Tampa, Matt Schaub threw for two long touchdowns, while Arian Foster, Ben Tate and Derrick Ward each ran for scores to help AFC South-leading Houston.

The Texans (7-3) extended their winning streak while playing without star receiver Andre Johnson to four consecutive games and head into their bye week with their best record through 10 games. The Bucs (4-5) have lost three straight and four of five following a 3-1 start.

Cowboys 44, Bills 7

In Arlington, Tony Romo guided touchdown drives on his first four possessions, throwing for the score on three of them, and Terence Newman returned one of his two interceptions for a touchdown.

The Cowboys (5-4) have won consecutive games and could be at the start of a big surge. Their next three foes went into this weekend a combined 6-18.

Romo completed his first 13 passes, including TD strikes of 34 yards to Dez Bryant and of 58 and 5 yards to Laurent Robinson. He finished 23 of 26, setting the franchise record for single-game accuracy by hitting 88.5 percent of his passes.

Dolphins 20, Redskins 9

In Miami, Reggie Bush scored two touchdowns and Miami twice intercepted Rex Grossman to earn their first home victory in nearly a year.

The Dolphins ended a franchise-record streak of seven consecutive losses in Miami since last Nov. 14.

Miami (2-7) won for the second week in a row after starting 0-7. The Redskins (3-6) dropped their fifth consecutive game, the longest losing streak of Mike Shanahan's career as a head coach.

Rams 13, Browns 12

In Cleveland, Phil Dawson missed a 22-yard field goal attempt after a bounced snap with just over two minutes left as Cleveland bungled another chance to win a game.

Dawson made four field goals in blustery conditions, but his line-drive attempt with 2:09 sailed left and capped a series of late gaffes by the Browns (3-6).

Long snapper Ryan Pontbriand's snap appeared to hit the right leg of one of Cleveland's linemen, causing the ball to skip back to holder Brad Maynard, who did a great job of placing the ball. However, Dawson's timing was thrown off and he missed the chip shot.

Cardinals choose Matheny as La Russa's successor

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals are replacing a manager who's third on the career victory list with a man who'll be writing his first lineup card on opening day.

Mike Matheny, a former catcher with the Cardinals who had been a minor league instructor, will be introduced as Tony La Russa's successor at a news conference Monday.

"I think he's going to be a great leader," Jim Edmonds, a teammate of Matheny's with the Cardinals, said Sunday night in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "If he goes out there and does what he's capable of doing and they put the players around him, he could be the manager for the next 20 years."

The 41-year-old Matheny played for the Cardinals from 2000-04, won three of his four Gold Gloves and was part of three postseason efforts including a World Series. He became a team leader playing for La Russa, who retired just days after leading the team to his second World Series title in 16 seasons.

Matheny's playing career blossomed after he signed a one-year free-agent deal to be the backup catcher in St. Louis. Though a career .239 hitter, Matheny did enough defensively to earn a starting job.

Matheny was one of six men the Cardinals interviewed to replace La Russa.

They also talked to Hall of Famer Ryne Sandberg, longtime Cardinals third-base coach Jose Oquendo, former Boston manager Terry Francona, Triple-A manager Chris Maloney, and Chicago White Sox coach Joe McEwing.

General manager John Mozeliak declined to comment on the hire aside from a one-word text to The Associated Press: "Tomorrow." La Russa did not respond to telephone and text messages.

Francona was the only candidate who had major league managing experience. He left the Red Sox after the team collapsed in September.

Oquendo coached for La Russa the last dozen years after playing the final decade of his career with the Cardinals and has had a handful of interviews for managing openings.

The Cardinals received permission to interview Sandberg, manager of the Phillies' Triple-A team.

Former Cardinals outfielder Chris Duncan, who played for La Russa and is on local sports talk radio, thought the Cardinals would go with Francona because it gave them the best chance to retain momentum from their unlikely World Series run. The Cardinals won the NL wild card on the final day of the season and were underdogs against the Phillies, Brewers and Rangers, but have a solid returning cast with or without free agent Albert Pujols in the fold.

"I think Matheny will be a great manager, given time," Duncan said. "He lacks managing experience, but it shows a lot about his character that the Cardinals hired him."

Matheny was with the Giants when his career was ended by concussions in 2006.

"He's a great leader, and an even better person," Edmonds said. "I think this is great. There's nobody that's going to work any harder than Mike."

Matheny's coaching staff could include some familiar names.

Pitching coach Dave Duncan, who was La Russa's right hand all 33 seasons, has one year remaining on his contract. The Cardinals have considered promoting Maloney in recent years, and Oquendo also could stay.

Chalmers wins Australian Open; Woods finishes 3rd

SYDNEY (AP) — The loudest cheers were for Tiger Woods. The Australian Open belonged to Greg Chalmers.

Chalmers won his national championship for the second time, closing with a 3-under 69 Sunday to hold off a late charge by Woods and a 50-foot birdie putt by John Senden that nearly forced a playoff.

Woods had his best chance of winning all year.

"Two holes on the back nine today, and I putted awful yesterday, or I would have been right there," Woods said.

Two tee shots led to bogeys on the back nine, though he also made birdie on the second-toughest hole at The Lakes on No. 12, then chipped in from just off the green for eagle on the 14th. Woods missed a 12-foot eagle putt on the 17th for a share of the lead.

Behind him, Chalmers made his final birdie with a brilliant tee shot on the par-3 15th hole to tap-in range, then played mistake-free down the stretch and picked up a meaningful par on the par-3 18th with an up-and-down from the bunker.

Chalmers last won the Australian Open in 1998 at Royal Adelaide, a week before the Presidents Cup in Melbourne.

The matches return to Royal Melbourne next week, and Woods at least showed that he wasn't a complete waste of a captain's pick by Fred Couples. He not only was the low American by finishing alone in third, he looked good doing it.

It was his best result against a full field since Woods last won two years ago at the Australian Masters.

Australia's Greg Chalmers holds the winner's trophy after the Australian Open golf tournament in Sydney, Australia, Sunday.

"I felt great," Woods said. "It's nice to finally be healthy again."

Chalmers finished at 13-under 275.

It was a strong field for the Australian Open, with eight Americans on the Presidents Cup team getting ready for next week. That included Woods, a steady presence on the leaderboard.

For Chalmers, satisfaction came from his name on the silver trophy again.

"I don't know if it's extra gratification," Chalmers said of beating a field that included a 14-time major champion. "I've got my name twice on that Stonehaven Cup."

Senden, the 54-hole leader, faltered early but gave himself a chance late with a good pitch across the 17th green for birdie. His long putt on the 18th went over the ridge and broke back toward the high side of the cup but missed by inches. He closed with a 72.

Defending champion Geoff Ogilvy had a 7-under 65 to tie for fourth with Adam Scott (68), Nick Watney (72), Nick O'Hern (72) and Jason Day, who hit his opening tee shot in the water and had a 74.

"If I keep putting myself in these kinds of positions, it's only a matter of time I learn the formula and break through and start to win," said Day, who has only one PGA Tour win in his four years on the U.S. tour. "I'm very positive about where my game is right now."

Six players from the top 10 at The Lakes will be at Royal Melbourne next week for the Presidents Cup.

Woods was within two shots of the lead when he made the turn, having gone mistake-free on the front nine to at least give himself a chance on the risk-reward holes along the back nine of The Lakes.

The task became tougher the way he played the 11th, which ultimately forced a bad decision two holes later.

Woods again hooked his tee shot on the par-5 11th, although with the wind at his back, it sailed over the portable toilet and into a sand dune where spectators had been walking all week. His ball was deep in a heel print, and he played an explosion shot sideways just to get out of that mess. He wound up missing a 7-foot par putt.

He made up for that with an 18-foot birdie on the 12th—one of only five birdies on that hole Sunday—and couldn't figure out how to play the 315-yard 13th. He went with driver for the second straight day, and this time it cost him.

"I shouldn't have gone for it," Woods said. "It's a tough tee shot for me because I'm caught right between clubs. Driver is too much and 3-wood is not enough. I tried to hit a big, slicing driver in there and should have just laid up."

"Unfortunately, I made the wrong decision and it cost me a shot."

Union to meet Monday to discuss NBA's offer

MIAMI (AP)—Decision day for NBA players may have arrived. And on the eve of perhaps the biggest meeting of the lockout, the league took its talking points to the public.

The players' association will meet in New York on Monday morning, a session that could lead to the end of the lockout or send it into a bigger tailspin. Representatives from all 30 teams are expected, as are other players, to examine and discuss a seven-page summary of the NBA's latest collective bargaining proposal to the union.

The proposal, which was obtained by The Associated Press, was dated Friday and addressed to union executive director Billy Hunter. Some who will be in the NBPA meeting said Sunday they had not yet seen it, creating some confusion over what exactly is on the table.

"We haven't asked for anything more than what we had," Miami player representative James Jones said Sunday. "We understand the times. We understand the economy. We just want a fair deal where both sides are bearing the weight of the present times and with an eye on the future of the game of basketball."

Sounds so simple. But it's not.

By Monday, things could finally become clear—because this union meeting may decide if basketball will be played this season.

But first, the NBA tried reaching the masses directly Sunday night.

Commissioner David Stern and Deputy Commissioner Adam Silver went on Twitter and talked everything from contraction (which has been discussed) to sending players to the D-League at slashed salaries (which isn't in the proposal).

Among those asking: Miami's Dwyane Wade and Philadelphia's Spencer Hawes. One of Hawes' questions was "since we have covered all of your alleged losses (and more) why am I not getting ready for a game tonight." The league said it disagreed with the premise.

Wade asked, "why are all your 'system solutions' only impacting the PLAYERS?? What have the owners (given) up of significance??" The NBA responded, "The economics & system favored the players in prior CBA," then again said team losses topped $300 million last season.

Someone asked if the league would consider replacement players. The answer: "Our goal is a season with our current players." Another wanted to know if contracts would become void if the NBPA decertifies, and the league said yes.

Next came a 92-second video the NBA posted to YouTube, which showed projections for a $7.7 million average salary for players in the 10th year of the current proposed deal and even had a hypothetical breakdown of what a team may look like in 2013-14, with a "superstar" making $17 million, an "All-Star" making $14 million, other starters making between $8-10 million and with a total payroll of about $77 million.

That projection means team payrolls will in theory top $115 million by the proposed deal's end, which could come to the chagrin of many owners. On Saturday, Stern said again if the current offer is rejected, a harsher one—where owners would keep about another $120 million of basketball related income annually, along with other system issues players didn't want—will take its place.

"We're not going to cancel the season this week," Stern said. "We're just going to present them what we told them we would."

The NBA wants a 72-game season to begin Dec. 15. For that to happen, a handshake deal would be needed this week, given that Stern said it will take about 30 days to get the season after an agreement is reached.

There are 17 topics in the memo, including how teams paying a luxury tax cannot acquire free agents in sign-and-trade deals after the 2012-13 season. One of the key points comes on Page 5, where the NBA says "there will be no limitations on a player's ability to receive 100% guaranteed salary in all seasons of a contract."

Players have repeatedly said they will reject any deal without guaranteed contracts.

"I'm going to sit down take a look at the deal and analyze it," Minnesota player rep Anthony Tolliver said Sunday, the lockout's 136th day. "Not like it's the first offer or the last offer, but just as one where I'll say 'Would I or my teammates want to play under these conditions?'"

Among the other points outlined in the summary sent to Hunter by Silver:

■ The union will choose between accepting either a 50-50 split of BRI or a band where they may receive between 49 percent and 51 percent, depending on economic projections;

■ All teams may still use a mid-level exception, though rules vary on whether a franchise is above or below the luxury-tax level;

■ Minimum team payrolls would be at least 85 percent of the salary cap in 2011-12 and 2012-13, and 90 percent starting in 2013-14;

■ Luxury tax rates would rise after the third year of the deal;

■ Maximum contract lengths would not exceed five years, and annual raises would be cut significantly to a maximum of 6.5 percent;

■ There would be an "amnesty" provision where a team may waive one player before any season, if that player was under contract at the inception of the CBA, and have his salary removed from the team's totals for luxury-tax and salary-cap purposes.

"I was a little bit more hopeful last week than I am this week," Tolliver said. "I'm trying not to be too negative but it's kind of hard not to when it's been this long and this many meetings. It's hard not to get continuously more pessimistic by the day. Hopefully this deal will blow me away in a good way."

But it's hard to believe that's going to be the case."

Meanwhile, talks about decertifying continue—even though the NBA said deals would become void if that happens.

An agent who spoke with the AP on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the ongoing dispute said "a lot of petitions have been signed already," but acknowledged some players aren't sure that move would get owners to relent on any issues.

"I would say the thing I don't like the most isn't about the deal specifically, but is the lack of information on what's actually on the table," the agent said. "That's the most frustrating thing. ... I think that the guys should actually know what's being proposed and decide from there."

Another person directly involved with the negotiations told the AP the NBA side is frustrated that the league's current offer is already being poorly received, even though most players have not seen the proposal.

That person reiterated Stern's words: The next offer will be much worse.

"It's time to think rationally about what we're talking about here," the person involved with negotiations said. "This is the deal. We've come too far. We've talked it out. This is the deal and there are things in this deal that neither side will like. Everyone made concessions. It's time to decide. We all talk about these arena workers and the effect this has on the local economy, all those things. If we mean what we say about those workers, this deal gets done and the season starts Dec. 15."

chances in the playoffs where only the Top 8 teams after the round-robin regular season will advance. Shirley has a 1-5 record with three games left and is in a tie for eighth to ninth place with Grillin'.

Kae Bernardo paced Shirley's with 28 points, posting 14 of them in the fourth quarter where the host pulled away. Shirley's was up by only seven after the third canto, 60-53, when Bernardo waxed hot in the fourth and J.R. Barrios and Errol Peredo backed him up after adding eight and six markers, respectively. IT&E Voyagers, Shark Attack remain in front

Jonny's IT&E Voyagers and Wild Bill's Bar & Grill's Shark Attack are still riding the wave in first place of the Saipan Billiards Association's 2011 Budweiser Summer/Fall Open 8-Ball League's Agingan and Obyan fields after the conclusion of Tuesday's matchups.

Both teams have been in control of their respective divisions for the majority of the season.

IT&E Voyagers downed sister-team IT&E Incredibles, 6-1, at home to improve their win-loss record to 60-17.

IT&E Voyagers are soaring above the field with a 12-game margin.

IT&E Incredibles remains in second place after the hit, but fell to a slate of 48-29.

Third-ranked Docomo Hustlers of Utopia Bar (43-34) shut out VFW Post 3457's X-Tream (21-56), 7-0, on the road to pull within five games of the runner-up spot.

Jonny's Home Boyz Five (42-35) went into Joe's Steakhouse and defeated Fotten Palau (17-60), 5-2.

IT&E Voyagers' Roman Rodriguez and Rolly Villanueva and Docomo Hustlers' Senen Pangelinan all ran the rack three times, while X-Tream's Joseph Achas has sunk the eight ball off the break twice.

In Obyan play, Shark Attack edged out Jonny's Crazy 8, 4-3, at home to improve its card to 50-27. Crazy 8 fell to a record of 36-41.

Shark Attack enjoys a nine-game lead over D'Pirates Bar & Grill's Pirata, who snuck past Jonny's Team SCS (38-39), 4-3, on the road.

Pacman, he was very successful in connecting on heavier blows. So if the fight was judged on who had more solid punches Marquez should have won. At the same time, if it were based on flashiness and the number of punches, Pacman should have won," Alvarez added.

The Trench Tech head further explained the decision was based on three factors: aggressiveness (who seemed more active and willing to engage), ring control, and number of punches.

Pacquiao showed more of all three and although Marquez was right in there, had he been more of the stalker instead of the counter fighter, we probably would have seen another draw and quite possibly a fourth fight. So the answer to your question is yes, I believe Pacman deserved the win! It was meant to be. Now, finally, we can see Mayweather versus Pacquiao," Alvarez said.

CNMI national team pitcher Joshua Jones and Marianas Visitors Authority's Bruce Bateman picked the Mexican as the winner.

"The first four rounds could have gone either way, but Marquez owned the fifth with several power shots that clearly dazed the champion and gave Pacquiao a cut on his lower lip. The pair traded blows at the tail end of the ninth and Pacquiao suffered a cut above his right eye on an accidental head butt in the 10th. The judges wasn't all scoring the rounds right," Jones said.

IT&E managed a 19-17 lead after the opening tip thanks to a couple of early 3-pointers, but Mobil battled back in the second period and claimed a 44-40 lead at halftime.

Juan Maratita came out with seven points in the rally, which was complemented by welcomed support.

Bart Demapan, Leo Factor, and Maratita led Mobil with an even 30 markers in the first half, while eight different players put a hand in for IT&E in the frame.

Sablan took the reins in the third period with 13 points as IT&E held a slight edge, 62-59, heading into the fourth quarter.

After being held to just 15 points in the previous period, Mobil's offense answered back and reciprocated IT&E's effort in the clutch.

Mobil fought hard in the fourth to grind out a 77-77 stalemate, but its shots ran cold in the bonus period.

Sablan lit up Mobil with 37 points in a gem of a game, while Demapan and Maratita tallied 20 apiece on the short end.

Back in Saturday night's late tiff, FGC built a healthy 17-9 advantage in the opening 10 minutes off six points apiece from Kae Bernardo and Lerio Pagarao. Rebels' Sahj Hossain managed six against the early onslaught.

Teams traded baskets in the second quarter as FGC maintained a 38-30 lead at halftime.

FGC's Pagarao added six points in the period, while Trevor Ogumoro chipped in seven for the Rebels, but heavy rainfall during the break forced organizers to postpone the match until Sunday.

Hiroto's younger brother, Ryuto, swam in the boys U8 100m freestyle and shattered his own record. Ryuto clocked in at 1:16.11, surpassing the 1:17.64 he recorded early this year.

Ryuto had the second fastest time among the 13 swimmers who participated in the 100m race. Sixteen-year-old Grace Kimball had the best time at 1:08.43.

Other swimmers who joined the event were Tsunami Saipan's Heong Joo Yoo (1:26.61), SSC's Taiga Sato (1:30.14), David Boyer (1:31.55), Hannah Pala-Ryuto and Kang also competed in the boys U8 50m freestyle and they both erased the previous age group mark. Kang timed in at 34.33 seconds to crush the 36.18 seconds mark of Ryuto (April 16, 2011). However, the latter reclaimed the age group record after clocking in at 33.85 seconds in the same race.

Twenty-two swimmers completed the 50m freestyle race with Tsunami Saipan's Takumi Tsunami Saipan coach Hiro Kimura lauded Ryuto Yanai and Kang for their record-breaking swims and also made special mention of Miku Tammy and Rivera siblings—Daime and Kyona.

"Miku is getting closer to the CNMI age record. Her time in the 200m freestyle is just three seconds short off the CNMI age group mark," Kimura said in an email to Saipan Tribune yesterday.

Tammy timed in at 2:49.99 in the 200m freestyle race and the girls 9 to 10 age group mark stands at 2:46.59 (Myana Welch/May 5, 2000). In the Team SCS's Erwin Gomez and Crazy 8's Rey Pinangay ran the rack a league-leading three times, while Crazy 8's Zaldy Quebral sunk the eight ball off the break once.

Next Tuesday, Agingan's IT&E Voyagers play host to home Boyz Five, the Docomo Hustlers welcome Fotten Palau, and the IT&E Incredibles calls over X-tream.

Meanwhile, Obyan's Team SCS visits Crazy 8, Poksu invites Shark Attack, and Pirata greets the Titans.

Try to review the video and try to mute the video. 116-112 for Manny Pacquiao was a convincing score. What was lacking was the total domination of Pacquiao, that's why viewers were not satisfied with the outcome," Del Rosario said.

Asked if a there should be a Pacquiao-Marquez duel for the fourth time, Saipan boxing fans said yes.

Pacquiao's win stirs passionate debate

Two friends were having a late dinner Sunday night and in between bites, they were also engaged in a heated debate. No, they were not talking of the pros and cons of the extension of federal immigrations laws in the CNMI nor the legalization or not of casino gambling here.

The frenzied conversation was about the Manny Pacquiao-Manuel Marquez bout at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas with the Filipino icon pulling off a controversial decision over the Mexican fighter. Pacquiao won on the scorecards of two judges after 12 grueling rounds, 115-113 and 116-112. The third judge had it tied, 114-114.

Manny Pacquiao, of the Philippines celebrates after his victory over Mexico's Juan Manuel Marquez during a WBO welterweight title fight Saturday, Nov. 12, 2011, in Las Vegas.

The contentious decision sparked discussions among boxing fans around the world, including those from Saipan. Some claimed Marquez was robbed off the victory for the second time, others said Pacquiao deserved to win for landing more despite not dominating his foe this time.

"First of all, I thought the fight was very exciting. In all 12 rounds, Pacquiao was the aggressor and was bringing the fight to Marquez. Marquez however was sensational in counter fighting and in countering Pacquiao's offense," Trench Tech president and MMA fighter Cuki Alvarez said.

Defending champion Pacific Islands Club/NVM is back on track after slipping past GPPC in overtime, 111-106, during the second game in the 3rd Annual Shirley's Coffee Shop Invitational Basketball League last Sunday night at the Gillette Multipurpose Gymnasium.

PIC pulled off the victory in the extension period after coming off back-to-back losses. The defending champion now has a 5-2 record for a share of third place with DFS Galleria and Fiesta Resort & Spa Saipan. GPPC fell to a 1-6 record and is at the bottom of the team standings in the 10-squad field.

J.R. Mina scored seven points in overtime, while Ponce Rasa canned three important free throws to lift PIC to the five-point win. Jessie Mina and Ziddy Johanes added one field goal apiece to help PIC's cause.

Only three players contributed for GPPC in the extra five minutes of the game with Randy Mungcal making five markers and Jerry Tolentino and Alex Ocampo chipping in three and two, respectively.

Rasa top-scored for PIC with 29 points, nailing 10 of them in the fourth period that ended in a deadlock, 96-all. Mungcal led all scorers with his 43 points.

The GPPC gunner exploded for 12 early points in first period, while Ocampo had 10 to give their team a 27-24 cushion. Tables turned in the second canto, as PIC hit five triples against GPPC's two for a 51-45 advantage.

The seesaw battle continued in the second half with GPPC reclaiming the lead after the third period, 72-71, behind the nine points of Mungcal and eight markers apiece of Ocampo and Boboy Sampang.

It was another back and forth game in the fourth period with GPPC forcing overtime after Sampang canned a triple in the closing seconds of the regulation. Sampang scored in all four quarters of the game but went cold in the extension period, allowing PIC to eke out the win.

Konflikt-IT&E sparked a late surge in a back-and-forth duel with Mobil and held on strong in the clutch to snatch a 92-84 victory in overtime in Sunday's Garapan Basketball League IT&E Cup held at the Garapan Basketball Court.

A continuation match preceded the main game, which ended in the Rebels overcoming an eight-point halftime deficit to upset FGC, 72-66.

Both Konflikt-IT&E and the Rebels are officially on a winning streak with a pair of wins apiece, while Mobil dropped its second game in three matches and FGC (2-1) was issued its first loss. Notably, Sunday's winners are also the only two unbeaten teams left in GBL's eight-team field.

Mobil trailed by three, 59-62, heading into the final period of regulation, but rallied at crunch time to force overtime, 77-77.

IT&E then nailed a trio of 3-pointers in the extra period to take the win.

IT&E's Elmer Esdrelon, Dave Sablan, and Wowie Abuel each helped make it rain in the shining moment.
